

State to seek execution rehearing

Lethal blow to law-abiding society, says Reagan

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

The state will petition for a rehearing of the California Supreme Court decision abolishing the death penalty, Gov. Reagan said Friday.

He said that if the decision goes unchallenged, "the judicial philosophy inherent in this ruling could be an almost lethal blow to society's right to protect law-abiding citizens and their families against violence and crime."

If the court won't grant the state's request for a rehearing, "the people should express their opinion through a constitutional amendment," Reagan said.

But reaction to the court's decision was mixed.

Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, author of a bill to repeal the death penalty, said the decision was not a victory for convicted killers on death row.

"It is a victory for the dignity of man, for those who believe in the sanctity of life," he said.

And former Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who unsuccessfully tried to get the 1960 Legislature to repeal capital punishment, termed the decision "the best thing that's happened in the field of criminal jurisdiction in the last 100 years."

The Supreme Court declared the death penalty unconstitutional Friday in a 6-1 decision.

The majority, including Chief Justice Donald Wright, appointed by Gov. Reagan two years ago, said that execution is cruel and unusual punishment in today's society.

"It degrades and dehumanizes all who participate in its processes," the court said. "It is unnecessary to any legitimate goal of the state and incompatible with the dignity of man and the judicial process."

The death sentences of 107 condemned prisoners were ordered converted to life sentences, a provision which caused Angela Davis' attorneys to demand her release on bail—as well as the release of all others now accused of "capital" crimes, who under state law can't quality for bail.

The issue of capital punishment also is before the U.S. Supreme Court. But the state court, in issuing its decision, said that regardless of what the high court does, death may not be exacted as punishment for crime in this state.

Reagan said in a prepared statement that he was asking Attorney General Evelle J. Younger "to petition the state Supreme Court immediately for a rehearing on this matter."

"If the court refuses to grant this request and refuses to reconsider this issue, the people should express their opinion through a constitutional amendment," he said.

$21.6-million request by General

Phone firm asks rate hike

General Telephone Co., which serves most of the Long Beach area, Friday applied to the state Public Utilities Commission to raise its annual rates by $21.6 million.

The phone company stated that it needs more money because of a recent wage hike for the Communications Workers of America.

It proposed raising the $21.6 million by:

—Boosting basic monthly rates 10 cents per month for residential customers (35 cents for businesses and 50 cents for PBX trunks).

—Charging customers 50 cents per month for not publishing their phone numbers in the phone book.

—Charging residential customers $10 for changing their phone numbers ($15 for businesses).

—Charging $18 instead of $12 for service connections for residential customers (for businesses, $25 instead of $18).

—And boosting message unit rates from 4.7 cents to 4.8 cents.

Telephone rates have gone up twice in the last two years.

General Telephone officials said that the rate for an average one-party residential service has increased 8½ per cent over 1960 rates while "the costs of other goods and services has gone up some 35 per cent or better, as demonstrated by the (federal government's) consumer price index."

Phone bills have gone up four times slower than other consumer prices, the phone company said.

"We desperately need the proposed increase to offset our latest wage settlement (with the union), especially in view of the fact that the California PUC granted us only about 66 per cent of our needed relief in our last rate request," said Richard L. Ohlson, vice president of revenue requirements.

He said that General Telephone's request would set its "rate of return" at 8.3 per cent—a figure that the PUC earlier "found reasonable."

ALTHOUGH the PUC found the 8.3 per cent figure reasonable, it granted the phone company only a 7.39 per cent rate of return in its last action, according to Mike Newman, area public relations administrator for General Telephone.

Newman said that he'd guess that the PUC wouldn't hold public hearings on General Telephone's newest application, since it recently finished hearings on the company's last rate increase.

He said the PUC would first determine the need for the requested rate increases and then ask the phone company to justify the specific increases it asked for.

The U.S. gave up its 99-year lease for the island last year.

John H. Cussens, a former San Franciscan who owns the island's only hotel, the Playacoco, told UPI his lawyer had advised him to call off a deal to sell the property.

"He said Hughes is interested in Corn Island and the San Juan River area," Cussens said. Another lawyer said he received intake until Wednesday or Thursday, they said.

The 20 per cent hike was recommended by a government-appointed board of inquiry.

The union's executives recommended that the miners accept the $293.8 million additional wage proposal suggested by the board of inquiry and end the six-week-old strike which had forced power blackouts and industrial shutdowns throughout the nation, the mineworkers' negotiators said.

Earlier the miners had rejected the package and said they wanted a 25 per cent hike or another $2.60 a week to go back to work.

Union sources said although they failed to get the extra hike, they did gain important concessions during the talks at Heath's No. 10 Downing Street residence, Sen. Clark L. Bradley, R-San Jose, also was requested to get in his car and drive back to Sacramento from his district office. He was expected to arrive in Sacramento during the evening.

Only 20 of the 40 state senators showed up for the Friday morning roll call in advance of the long three-day holiday weekend. The Legislature won't meet Monday, Washington's birthday.

It takes a quorum of 21 members to perform virtually any Senate business. But a member can place a "quorum call" and the sergeants at arms are directed to round up the absentees. Until the call is lifted, senators are confined to chambers except when they get special permission to leave.

Early vote favors contract

Dockers ready to work

By LOU GODFREY
Staff Writer

Striking longshoremen in Long Beach and Los Angeles late Friday prepared to start moving cargo Sunday morning after day-long balloting indicated the contract ending the 135-day dock strike would be approved by their union.

Longshoremen in San Diego, San Francisco and Portland voted by wide margins to accept a new 18-month contract with the shippers' Pacific Maritime Association.

Wilmington's Local 13 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union reported that although the local vote tally won't be complete until this afternoon, dispatchers and a few other workers are expected on the docks today to ready the area for cargo movement Sunday.

In San Francisco, ILWU

Local 10 reported a 1,640-671 vote to accept the contract. San Diego's Local 29 voted to accept 99-20, with voting almost complete. Local 8 in Portland favored the contract 600-400, with returns still incomplete late Friday.

UNION President Harry Bridges is expected to announce the final vote results today, but Bridges and other union officials have predicted approval following their strong recommendations in favor of the measure.

Sidney Roger, ILWU spokesman, predicted ratification in view of the approval at a caucus of 110 union leaders this week.

"Offhand, I'd say it has a strong chance of passing," added a union member at San Francisco Local 10 as his and other secret ballots

Two Mao-Nixon talks slated

HONOLULU (UPI) — President Nixon will meet at least twice in China with Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, informed sources said Friday, but the chairman will not be at the Peking airport to greet him next week.

Meanwhile, presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen at a briefing Friday Nixon knows that diplomatic relations between the U.S. and China are out of the question at this time, but hopes his trip will establish "an on-going communications belt."

The President Friday continued his relaxing stay at Kaneohe Marine Air Base, resting and studying for his departure. He goes to Guam today and the next day leaves for China.

Ziegler read to newsmen from notes he took Thursday during a private meeting between Nixon and congressional leaders of both parties. The press secretary said Nixon used the phrase "on-going communications belt" in describing one of the key objectives of the visit.

Ziegler declined to say what form the belt would take or if it would include a permanent U.S. representative in China.

Informed sources said, meanwhile, that Nixon and Mao would hold their first meeting in Peking probably on Tuesday. They said it was unlikely that Mao would be at the airport to welcome Nixon when he arrives Monday.

Ziegler said Nixon will report on his trip to the bipartisan congressional leaders on Feb. 29, one day after he returns from China. He will also recount the trip to a cabinet meeting later in that week. No report to the public is currently planned.

British strike vote set

LONDON, Saturday (UPI) — Britain's striking coal miners ended 13 hours of talks with the state-run coal board and Prime Minister Edward Heath early today and said they will vote on a 20 per cent pay hike proposal and stop picketing the coal mines.

Union leaders said picketing of coal mines would cease immediately until the results of the vote were known. This could

Hooky players stall Senate work, adjournment

Combined News Services

SACRAMENTO — The hooky-plagued state Senate tried all day Friday to get a 21-member quorum, performed no business and couldn't go home because there weren't enough members present to approve adjournment until late in the day.

Late in the afternoon, Sen. Peter Behr, R-Tiburon, was sent word in Long Beach to get on an airplane and return to Sacramento so he could cast the 21st vote needed to approve an adjournment resolution.

The California Highway Patrol was asked to escort Behr to a commercial airplane from Long Beach, where he was attending a legislative committee hearing on aging.

5 die in midair crash

JACKSONVILLE, Ark.—An Air Force C130 cargo plane collided with a T37 jet trainer Friday night killing the five crewmen aboard the transport. The two men flying the jet parachuted to safety. Officials at Little Rock Air Force Base said the jet pilots were uninjured. The planes crashed about three miles north of the Little Rock suburb of Jacksonville, Ark., where the base is located. The trainer crashed in an open field. The C130 plowed burning into a wooded area, ripping a furrow 15 feet wide and 100 feet long through the trees. The Air Force identified two of the dead as 1st Lt. Maurice Cherry, 24, and Sgt. Raymond Hughes, both of Jacksonville. The Air Force said the names of the other three dead were being withheld until their relatives could be notified.

WASHINGTON—Alcohol is "the major drug problem in this country," the government reported Friday in announcing a $200,000 advertising campaign against excessive drinking endorsed by the liquor industry. In the first annual report to Congress required by a new law, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that about 9 million persons—nearly 10 per cent of the work force—suffer from alcoholism or lesser drinking problems.

"The accomplishment was a major milestone in vertical takeoff and landing aircraft," NASA said.

Jordanian doctor held for knife-murder of 4-year-old

Combined News Services

A Jordanian eye doctor was charged Friday with the murder of one of three children stabbed to death as they lay in their cots in the children's ward of Victoria Hospital in Blackpool, Eng., Thursday morning. Dr. Ahmad Alami, 32, the son of Jerusalem's chief Moslem religious leader, was charged with the murder of Dehrah Ann Carson, 4. Two other young children were stabbed to death as they slept and two nurses were injured severely by knife wounds the same night, according to the hospital staff. Alami is a resident at the hospital.

Entering the court building for a hearing on the murder charge, Alami wore a blanket over his head, preventing onlookers from seeing his face. He was ordered held pending a further appearance Feb. 25. The hospital staff found Martin Langhorne, 2, and Nicholas Scott, 2 dead with the Carson child in the children's ward of the hospital. Arren Quamer, 2, and two nurses were severely injured the same night from knife wounds, hospital staff said.

Long hours

Earl Rhode's long hours at work as an administrator of the Cost of Living Council may have led to his death in an apparent murder-suicide by his wife, a co-worker said Friday. Rhode and his wife, DeLores, both 28, were found shot in the head at their home in Silver Spring, Md., a Washington suburb. Mrs. Rhode apparently shot her husband as he lay on a couch and then shot herself, according to police. A colleague who reported the crime to police said Rhode had confided that his wife was upset about his long hours.

Cash award

A Ventura Superior Court judge has overturned a jury's verdict and awarded country western singer Johnny Cash $108,055 from the Sequoia Insurance Co. Cash had sued the company for damages he paid the government after a pickup truck he was driving started a forest fire in the Los Padres National Forest. Cash's suit against the company charged that Sequoia should have provided his defense in the suit that stemmed from the 1965 fire. Cash lost the earlier suit and was ordered to pay the government $72,000 because of negligence in operating the truck and failing to contain the fire and notify authorities. A Superior Court jury ruled last year that the insurance company was not bound to defend Cash, but the Judge vacated the jury's verdict and awarded Cash the $72,000, plus interest and legal fees.

Plant rumor

There are several rumors that General Motors Assembly Division in South Gate is closing and relocating. Is this true? My husband works there and can't find out. Mrs. J.C., Westminster.

"The rumors are absolutely wrong," said John Hartnett, assistant regional manager with GM public relations office in Los Angeles. "I don't know how these rumors started. This is the first I've heard of it," he said. Your husband can check out future tales at the personnel department at his plant.

Record check

In the 1940s, I was convicted of burglary in Washington and sent to prison. I recently was fired from my job as a security guard because the company found out about my record. Is it possible for me to get my arrest record sealed? J.S., Long Beach.

Washington law does not permit any sealing of a adult criminal records. Even if you were able to obtain a pardon from the governor, an extremely difficult thing to do, your record would not be sealed. The pardon merely would be added to your file. You can, however, apply for a final discharge decree which restores your civil rights for such things as voting, and is, in effect, a declaration of rehabilitation. You can apply for a final discharge by sending your name, address and date of conviction to the Bureau of Prison Terms and Parole, 805 Capitol Center Building, Olympia, Wash. 98504. A California parole officer then will visit you and decide if a final discharge should be issued. When you apply for a job, you can present your final discharge document, but a board spokesman explained that it still is up to the individual employer whether or not you will be hired. It's unlikely that a security guard firm will hire a person with a felony conviction. The spokesman suggested that you consider another type of career.

Buff buff

On Nov. 10 I took an aluminum intake manifold to Lustre Metal Polishing, 14616 Lakewood Blvd., in Bellflower, to be polished. When I picked it up two weeks later it had not been done satisfactorily and the owner told me he had spent the normal amount of time on it and that the "casing was so porous and bad that this is as good as you can get it." Later I took the manifold to another shop where they did an excellent job. I asked Lustre Metal Polishing for the $30 back that I paid them and they said they would refund it but they keep stalling. Can ACTION LINE help? L.C., Long Beach.

No, "I don't feel I owe him a refund and I never said he would get one," Fred Lofton, owner of Lustre Metal Polishing told ACTION LINE. He said he had just finished polishing the manifold and hadn't cleaned off the compounds when you came to pick it up. "He wouldn't wait for me to clean it off so I told him how to clean it and told him if I missed anything in the polishing job, bring it back," Lofton said. Since you didn't bring it back, and since he had spent "no less than eight hours" working on it, he feels you aren't entitled to a refund.

Reserve

Can ACTION LINE tell me what type of activities the Long Beach Police Reserve force performs? How can I become a member? L.P., Long Beach.

Members of the police reserves donate eight hours a month helping out in such areas as the booking desk, the communications center or sometimes in the field. Members also must attend weekly meetings. They are eligible for some paid work as guards at athletic events and other activities. To join, you must be between the ages of 21 and 45 and you must complete a reserve training program. You can apply by attending one of the weekly meetings on Tuesdays at 7:15 p.m. at the police station, 400 W. Broadway.

Grand juror jailed in dispute

By NOEL SWANN
From Our L.A. Bureau

A Los Angeles Superior Court judge Friday ordered the temporary release of a female member of the 1970 County Grand Jury from a jail where she has been held for more than three weeks without bail in a child-custody dispute.

The situation came to light earlier in the day when county Supervisor Kenneth Hahn called for an investigation of the incident.

At issue is a bitter dispute between Superior Court Judge Richard Schauer and Mrs. Barbara Sanchez, a mother of three who is resisting a court order to relinquish custody of her 11-year-old niece.

Her husband, Ernest Sanchez, chairman of the board of trustees of Loyola University, has become so angry with Schauer's action that he's taken out a declaration of intent to run against him in the June 6 primary.

He said he hasn't decided whether or not to run.

Court sources said Friday that Schauer had simply carried out the law and that the contempt citation was the only way to force Mrs. Sanchez to comply with what they called a valid court order.

Mrs. Sanchez, meanwhile, has been jailed at the infirmary of the Sybil Brand Institute for Women in Los Angeles since Jan. 26.

Sanchez said the niece has lived with his family most of the time since her mother, Mrs. Sanchez' sister, and her father were divorced when she was about 1½ years old.

When the sister died in 1967, the niece moved in on a permanent basis, he said. "Jane's (the sister's) last request was to Barbara that she take care of Katie," he said.

Sanchez said he and his wife wanted to adopt Katie but that her father, Bruce Noonan, would not give the needed consent. He said they filed for guardianship proceedings but by this time Noonan had left the country and gone to Vietnam as a civilian employee. Sanchez said that during the next four years Noonan contributed nothing to Katie's support, although he was earning about $20,000 a year. Noonan did send cards and presents on holidays and birthdays, he said.

When Noonan returned from Vietnam, the guardianship case was reopened and Schauer awarded him custody of his daughter. Court officials said that this was done under a state law that a natural parent is given custody unless he is found to be unfit. Sanchez said the court failed to recognize later rulings which give more weight to the child's welfare.

Authorities Friday did not disclose when Mrs.

Sanchez would be released, but her husband said she was to undergo treatment by her personal physician starting Tuesday. She is suffering from a hyperthyroid condition and a neck lesion.

Sanchez said his wife would return to the Sybil Brand Institute after her physician examines her and prescribes treatment.

Auto jack slips, kills mechanic in Wilmington

A Wilmington auto mechanic was killed Friday when a car he was working on slipped its jacks and caused a long-handled wrench to pin his neck to the floor of a garage.

Police identified the victim as Dionisio Rodriguez, 21, of 826A Fres Ave., whose family lives in Mexico. The accident occurred at 305 W. Anaheim St.

2 held without bail in killing

Two of four young men arrested in connection with the beating death of financier Alan Scott MacFarlane were ordered held on murder and robbery charges Friday in Municipal Court in Santa Monica.

The other two, each 16 years old, were turned over to the custody of county juvenile authorities.

Judge Rex Minter ordered Richard Light, 20, and Dwight Aaron Walter, 18, held without bail until their preliminary hearing March 10.

MacFarlane, 43, vice president and controller of Transamerica Financial Corp., was beaten to death on Jan. 31 in an apartment-motel in Hollywood. His body, wrapped in a blue blanket, was found the next day in Baldwin Hills.

Bulldozer working in dump buries, kills 4-year-old boy

A 4-year-old Westminster boy died Friday when a bulldozer operating in a dump near Corona Del Mar accidentally buried him under a load of refuse, Orange County sheriff's deputies said.

The body of Ruben Nino Ruiz of 6431 Walt St. was found beneath the surface of a public dump at the end of Bonita Canyon Road.

Deputies said the boy went to the dump with his father, John Moses Ruiz, who does light hauling with his stake-body truck.

Ruiz unloaded half the truck when he discovered his son missing from the vehicle's cab where he had been left.

About 40-feet from Ruiz' truck a bulldozer, operated by Melvin Leon Hazen, 23, of 3106 Maple St., Orange, pressed trash as it was unloaded from trucks.

Hazen and Ruiz found the child's body a few feet under the surface of the ground where the bulldozer had been operating, deputies said.

L.A. granted $6 million to combat drunk-driving

The Department of Transportation allocated $6 million to Los Angeles County Friday to combat the drinking driving problem in that traffic-congested part of Southern California.

Transportation Secretary John Volpe said it was the largest single amount awarded in a project total of $82 million for 35 school safety action projects in a three-year program.

The department committed $1.7 million to Los Angeles County for the current fiscal year. Allocations of $2.1 million a year for 1973 and 1974 are subject to Congressional appropriations.

Volpe said the department is awaiting proposals that would lead to contracts for alcohol safety projects in Delaware, Idaho, Puerto Rico, Sioux City, Iowa, and Salt Lake City, and the Utah counties of Salt Lake, Box Elder, Davis, Utah and Weber.

Suit on 'double taxing'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Assembly's tax committee chairman Friday urged seeking a court injunction against Los Angeles County Assessor Philip E. Watson for a plan to "double tax mobile home owners."

Assemblyman Joe A. Gonsalves, D-La Mirada, asked the State Board of Equalization to file suit against Watson.

He said mobile home owners pay an in-lieu property tax based on the purchased price.

"Assessor Watson's action requires payment of the property tax twice in one year and, in my opinion, is a violation of the law of the State of California."

'Don't waste vote on Wallace' Muskie 'whistlestops' Florida

By WILLIAM BROOM
Our National Bureau Chief

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Sen. Edmund Muskie campaigned by train Friday, blowing the whistle at each stop on Alabama Gov. George Wallace, his major opposition in the Florida Democratic presidential primary.

For the first time in the campaign, Muskie said he is opposed to a constitutional amendment which would ban busing for the purpose of racial balance in schools.

Muskie's train took him through the state's central, rural and largely conservative communities where Wallace was a big winner in the 1968 presidential election. Muskie told his audiences they would be wasting their vote by supporting Wallace at the polls in the March 14 primary.

"WHATEVER happens in Florida, the rest of the country knows he is not going to be the candidate of the Democratic party," Muskie said at Deland. "They know he is certainly not going to be the next president of the United States. The rest of the country wants to know whether Florida agrees."

The campaign train has become an obsolete vehicle in recent elections, but Muskie's staff decided to revive it as a device to dramatize their candidate's appeal to all spectrums. With intensive advance effort, they were able to attract friendly crowds of up to 700 at four cities. The train will continue south to Miami today.

Since the Florida Legislature moved this week to put the school busing issue on the ballot for an advisory vote, all other issues have been pushed into the shadows. Wallace's close identification as an opponent of integrated schools has been enhanced by the development.

IN A television interview in Jacksonville before the train departed, Muskie said he was opposed to an antibusing amendment to the U.S. Constitution. He said he would not advise Floridians how to vote on the issue. Busing is "the least desirable" means of integrating schools but necessary until high quality education can be brought within the reach of all neighborhoods, Muskie said.

Wallace followed Muskie in Jacksonville, which has strongly supported him in the past, with a luncheon speech and a night rally in the Gator Bowl.

Accompanied by 75 Alabama labor leaders at the $100-a-plate luncheon, Wallace dismissed Muskie's reference to his candidacy. "The average citizen is so upset with all the liberal policies that have been originated by the people running in this presidential race that they will vote for the people's candidate — me," said the governor.

Muskie in an obvious reference to the busing issue at Winter Park, said:

"I have been told the only way to win this primary is to play on people's fears, to seek the support of one group at the expense of another. I am not interested in being elected president by any such technique."

CAMPAIGN '72

MUSKIE said he thought people would turn their backs on Wallace after examining his views closely.

"The reason he won't be the next president is that when people focus their attention on the values he has represented in his campaign, they will turn away from him so fast his head will spin."

Although the crowds were not large, Muskie's strategists professed to be pleased by their decision to campaign by train. Folk and country singers in mod clothing entertained before the candidate appeared on the observation platform in an effort to tie the Age of Aquarius to the age of Dewitt Clinton for audiences largely composed of college students and retired pensioners.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., suffering with a cold, canceled part of a swing through snowy Wisconsin Friday because of hazardous driving conditions. In Minnesota on Thursday he said he would name blacks and women to his cabinet if he were elected president.

In other developments: — Mayor John V. Lindsay's managers in New York announced he would debate other Democratic candidates on television in Florida the two nights before primary balloting. They said Sens. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., and Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., had agreed to debate Lindsay.

— Former Sen. Eugene

J. McCarthy, D-Minn., filling less than an hour before the deadline Thursday, became the fifth candidate to enter Ohio's May 2 Democratic primary.

— Former Rep. Brooks Hays, D-Ark., a racial moderate and former White House adviser, announced he would run for the house seat now held by Rep. Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, R-N.C. Hays, 73, is director of the Ecumenical Institute at Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem.

— Dr. Benjamin Spock, stand-in presidential candidate of the Peoples Party, said in Pittsburgh the United States should abandon all overseas military bases, which he said were no longer necessary for national security but were "an excuse to maintain our worldwide power structure."

— In Manchester, N.H., McGovern said Nixon's proposed new defense budget would spend billions of dollars "for needless overkill" and "neglects the urgent accumulated needs of our own society."

— Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles filed suit in Florida demanding that his name be withdrawn from the March 14 primary ballot without requiring him to declare that he was not a candidate for the Democratic nomination. Claiming invasion of privacy, Yorty contended he was not a presidential candidate "in Florida."

Sen. Mondale warns busing hysteria periling integration

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — A leading Senate school desegregation spokesman warned Friday that emotionalism and "irrational fears" surrounding the school busing issue could impede the nation's historic progress toward educational equality.

In a major policy statement that set the stage for the start of what is expected to be a long and bitter Senate fight on school busing next week, Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., placed himself squarely against the growing congressional opposition to school busing to achieve racial integration.

Mondale vowed to fight either a constitutional amendment or new antibusing legislation that would reverse the trend of recent court decisions requiring busing to achieve integration.

"SCHOOL desegregation is a fact of American educational life," Mondale told a near-empty Senate chamber presided over by one of the chief antibusing supporters, Florida Democrat Billy Gambrell. "The law of the land is clear, and it will not change. Officially imposed school segregation — whether the result of state law or covert policy — must be overcome."

Referring to a host of antibusing amendments that will be offered to a higher education bill scheduled for debate next week, Mondale said the bill which authorizes financial help for transportation of students to achieve desegregation if local school districts require it, "does not require any school district to bus a single student (or) desegregate a single school."

Mondale, who is chairman of the Select Committee on Equal Educational Opportunity that has been studying the school desegregation problem for two years, said the Supreme Court has not required racial balance in schools but only that "every reasonable effort must be made to overcome segregation."

"NOTHING we do here next week will reverse 18 years of unanimous rulings by the Supreme Court, or alter Fourteenth Amendment requirements," Mondale said in a reference to the antibusing amendments now pending before the House.

At the same time, however, Mondale conceded that there have been "legitimate complaints" about the school desegregation process, including busing that "has worked unnecessary hardships," arbitrary court decisions and inflexible administration of the law.

"But we will not answer these criticisms by refusing the federal support needed to make school desegregation educationally successful, or by withdrawing the federal government from enforcement of the Fourteenth Amendment," he said, reading from an 18-page speech.

The choice facing the nation is not "between blind acceptance of 'massive busing for racial balance' or total rejection of support for any transportation to achieve school desegregation," Mondale said. "Busing is the means — and at times the only means — by which segregation in public education can be reduced. But in itself, busing can be either helpful or harmful."

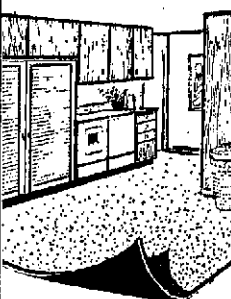

Drawing from the testimony taken by his committee, Mondale said, "none of the hundreds of educators with whom I have talked in the past two years" supports unnecessary busing to achieve an arbitrary racial balance.

"Nor do I believe that educationally advantaged students should be bused to schools where they will be overwhelmed by a majority of students from the poorest and most disadvantaged backgrounds. All the evidence we have collected indicates that this kind of 'desegregation' helps no one at all."

Demos adopt tax plank drawn in Long Beach

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

The taxation plank California Democrats will submit to the party's national convention will bear the mark of deliberations done in Long Beach last month, Walter L. Mallonee said Friday.

Mallonee, a Democratic candidate for Congress in the Long Beach-Orange County 32nd District was chairman of the district platform session on taxation. Its recommendations were accepted in toto by the state Democratic party's Commission on Platform and Policy, the only district report thus honored.

A MEMBER of the state tax panel, Mallonee invited area Democrats to take part today in party platform deliberations at day-long public sessions in the Los Angeles Convention Center, 1201 S. Figueroa St.

The program will close with a $12-a-plate dinner to be addressed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. Tickets are available at Long Beach Democratic Headquarters, 3390 Magnolia Ave.

MALLONEE said the present tax structure "is a mockery of the theory of an equitable and productive tax base. Meaningful reform of our tax laws will come when the voters demand a tax system that is simple, equitable and imposes minimum restraints on economic growth."

Personal savings at 25-year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reflecting a lack of confidence in the economy, Americans saved a greater share of their take-home pay in 1971 than in any years since 1946, a government report shows.

The Commerce Department disclosed Friday that the savings rate of disposable personal income last year was 8.2 per cent, the biggest since 9.5 per cent of 1946.

Economists watch the savings rate figures closely. They are supposed to be gauges of consumer confidence and reflect how much government can depend on consumer spending as a stimulant to the economy.

The savings rate declined to 7.8 per cent in the last three months of 1971, when President Nixon's new economic program began to take hold.

But during the first nine months of the year, the rate averaged well above 8 per cent and wound up the year at 8.2 per cent.

Economists say a savings rate of about 6 per cent of take-home pay is customary. During 1969, the first year of the Nixon administration, that was the average percentage.

But the index of confidence in the economy grew worse in 1970, rising to 7.9 per cent as the nation suffered through a recession.

The administration says it is not counting on this high savings rate coming down significantly in 1972, even though a substantial expansion in the economy is projected. Normally, economic expansions are accompanied by a step-up in consumer spending.

The department gave revised figures for gross national product market value of the nation's goods and services, and disclosed that the economy grew at a vigorous 5.8 per cent in the last three months of the year. This was slightly below the 6.1 per cent announced in preliminary estimates.

GNP rose by $19.5 billion in the October-December quarter, essentially the same figure announced earlier. The main revisions were largely offsetting. For example, net exports of goods and services were $2.5 billion lower than the preliminary estimate, but business investment was higher by almost the same amount.

NIXON RAPPED ON CHINA

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Leaders of the 13.6 million-member AFL-CIO said Friday that President Nixon's policy "tilt" toward Communist China could endanger U.S. alliances with Japan and other Asian democracies and jeopardize world peace.

"We are opposed to dictatorship and we are opposed to doing nice things to help dictators who deny basic human rights to their people," AFL-CIO President George Meany said.

Meany said the Red Chinese had done nothing to reciprocate for Nixon's easing of trade restrictions and other concessions.

"They could put a little pressure on Hanoi to get some kind of a decent settlement that would terminate the war in Southeast Asia. Instead of that they are encouraging Hanoi, and so is Moscow," Meany told a news conference.

"It would be self-defeating for the United States if the administration were to tilt our nation's policy toward Communist China and downgrade efforts to achieve closer relations with Japan and restore our traditional friendship with India," said a statement adopted by the AFL-CIO's 35-man policy-making executive council.

"We see no merit in the administration's policy of a spectacular shifting of weight from one side to another. Such weight-throwing exercises are too dangerous in the present critical world situation."

IAM files suit against Pay Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Machinists Union Friday filed its long-promised lawsuit to regain a 17-cent hourly pay raise that the Pay Board has denied to 62,000 aerospace workers.

The suit, filed in U. S. District Court here, is a companion to one filed earlier by the United Auto Workers seeking reinstatement of a similar raise for 31,000 of its aerospace workers.

Friday's suit by the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists alleges that the Pay Board was "arbitrary, capricious and inconsistent" last month when it rejected the union's contracts with five aerospace firms.

The board, over objection of its labor members, said the 12 per cent pay raises in the contracts were out of line with its 5.5 per cent standard.

Although it rejected the full 51-cent hourly raise, the board later said it would approve a raise this year of 34 cents and would allow the unions to add the other 17 cents to next year's raises.

But the unions say the 34 cents was due them as a cost-of-living catch-up agreed to before the Pay Board's rules took effect. Therefore, they argue, the board had no power to consider anything but 17 cents of the total raise, and that falls within the board's guideline.

The IAM suit is similar to the UAW's in most respects. The main difference is that the UAW obtained letters of agreement in 1968 in which the firms involved agreed to pay the cost-of-living catch-up this year. The IAM relies on claimed oral agreements with McDonnell Douglas Corp. and the Boeing Co., and on a letter from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. dated last July 19.

The unions say their workers currently are being paid the 34-cent raise the Pay Board said it would approve, even though the contracts will not be formally renegotiated unless the court action fails.

Tax rebate urged to cut joblessness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three prominent economists Friday predicted unemployment is likely to remain significantly above administration forecasts this year. One of them urged a $100 rebate for every taxpayer to give the economy a shot in the arm.

Arthur M. Okun, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Johnson administration who proposed the rebate on 1971 income taxes, joined Prof. Saul H. Hyman of the University of Michigan and Yale Prof. Henry C. Wallich, a Republican, in predicting the White House will miss its goal of bringing the jobless rate down to 5 per cent by the end of the year.

Okun, the most pessimistic, saw an average unemployment rate of 5.7 per cent and a rate of 5.4 per cent by the end of the year.

SINCE each one-tenth of 1 per cent in the unemployment rate represents 80,000 jobs, the unemployed could number nearly a quarter of a million more by election day than the administration calculations would allow.

Okun's advice to the House-Senate Economic Committee differed sharply from that of economic advisers to the Business Council, a prestigious group of executives of the 100 largest corporations, who felt the administration's policies are so stimulative that inflation is likely to be resumed.

"As I read history," Okun said, "it reveals that never have we made the fiscal error of doing too much too soon."

There is little likelihood that Congress, already wary of a projected $25.5-billion deficit in the budget for the next fiscal year, would take Okun's advice.

OKUN sharply disputed Labor Secretary James Hodgson, who told the committee Thursday that Democrats were concentrating on unemployment while ignoring all-time employment figures of 80.6 million jobholders.

The better metaphor, Okun said, was to compare unemployment with the tip of the iceberg.

"Tell any economist the unemployment rate," he said, "and he can tell you whether productivity is strong or depressed, whether the profit share of GNP (the gross national product) is ebullient or weak, whether the disadvantaged are making their way into good jobs, whether poverty is on its long-term downward path, whether the welfare rolls are abnormally swollen."

Welfare cost probers ask more funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials are stepping up their checking on welfare spending and want more money for more watchdogs.

Welfare costs are spiraling so rapidly, the government's top welfare administrator said, that a corps of auditors is needed to check on where the money is being misused or mis-spent.

"We don't really have any way of tracking what's going on," said John D. Twinn, administrator of the Social and Rehabilitation Service of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Twinn said he needs $2.9 million immediately to hire and train 427 new accountants and other professionals to serve as watchdogs of state and county welfare programs.

Tape tells mental 'blackout' Pacheco 'in fog' on slaying

By MARY NEISWENDER Staff Writer

"Everything is a fog. All I remember is being in the house and seeing my wife and this other guy embrace in bed and then them getting out of bed and I saw them both totally nude. After that I don't remember anything."

In a dramatic 25-minute tape recording, accused wife-slayer Manuel Pacheco Friday told his version of the Nov. 2 shooting of his wife and her companion to a Los Angeles Superior Court jury that is expected to begin deliberating his fate late next week.

The tape recording, which brought tears to the eyes of Pacheco for the first time in the week-long trial, apparently will be the only testimony from the former police officer. He is not expected to take the stand in his own defense.

GENTLEMEN, I've been sitting here for hours and hours trying to place what actually happened, and I don't know. Everything is in a fog," the 24-year-old Carson resident told investigators at Firestone sheriff's station five hours after the shooting.

"I remember screaming, pushing, yelling . . . the next thing I knew we were pulling into the station here and I had a cigarette in my hand and I don't even smoke.

"I've been trying to figure out in my mind what happened and I just can't remember . . . My mind is all just cloudy. Everything happened so fast.

"THE ONLY thing I can remember is seeing them in bed, and that's clear. I saw them lying in bed, in my bed, embracing and then I saw them jump out of bed and they were both standing there, both completely nude . . . neither one of them had any stitch of clothing on . . . and that's all I remember. It's just a blur . . . I don't remember what happened"

Under questioning by investigators, Pacheco said he could not even remember being with his brother, Alfredo, who entered the house with him, or seeing his children who came running out of their bedroom when the shooting began. In fact, he said, his memory of the entire night was faulty because he was "nervous and upset" and he apparently completely blanked out even before he entered the back door of the home.

THE YOUNG defendant said he remembered being at his brother's home earlier in the evening and being "really upset . . . and worried about the children and my wife."

"I love my wife and my children and I wanted to go by and — just to make sure things were secure and everything was all right, and also, more important than that was — not more important — but I wanted to pick up some of my material that was in the garage . . . study material for a promotional oral examination.

"I went in — into the garage because I always wanted to make sure the house was secure. The kids appeared to be asleep and the house was quiet. All I wanted to do was get some stuff I had in the garage . . . I needed some papers very bad because I (had) just been a nervous wreck. I figured I gotta do something: I gotta start studying. Next thing I knew I saw them in bed."

Pacheco also said he didn't remember whether he was armed when he entered the house.

"I don't remember ever having my gun throughout the night . . . I've thought and thought and thought. I said, 'Where in the hell did it come from?' I don't know."

"It's just like I exploded . . . just like I just tightened up and exploded. I don't remember what happened. It was a fog. I couldn't think . . . I couldn't think . . . I still can't think."

The tape recording came on the heels of several more witnesses called by the defense to back up previous testimony that the young officer was irrational.

FIRESTONE Sheriff's Deputy Bertram Bartholomew, one of several officers on the stand, said Pacheco was yelling and crying at the time he was booked at the station on charges of assault with a deadly weapon. His wife at that time was only wounded as was her companion, Alfred Thatcher. She died a week later and the charge was changed to murder.

Earlier, Los Angeles Police Officer Donald McGuire testified that, while he rode as Pacheco's partner in a police patrol car in 1970, an unusual amount of threats were made on Pacheco's life by those arrested.

Judge halts ban on nude dancing

A Superior Court judge issued a preliminary injunction Friday prohibiting further prosecutions of nude dancing in Los Angeles.

The order signed by Judge John L. Cole stopped enforcement of 12 city ordinances adopted in 1969.

The action was the result of a suit filed by Warren I. Wolfe against the police chief and city attorney contending the city is wasting money by prosecuting cases which do not stand up in court.

Record aboard a flying kite

DEATH VALLEY (UPI) — Bill Bennett, the daredevil "Australian birdman" who flies through the air dangling from a delta wing kite, claimed the world record Friday for the longest and highest such flight.

Bennett, 40, of Sydney, Australia, said he leaped off Dante's Peak with his kite and glided to the valley floor 5,757 feet below.

He said the flight lasted 11 minutes and 47 seconds and extended for 6.2 miles as the crow — or rather the kite — flies.

Judge reconsiders Angela bail since death penalty ban

SAN JOSE (AP) — Superior Court Judge Richard Arnason said he will rule next Wednesday on a defense request to free black revolutionary Angela Davis on bail in light of the California Supreme Court ruling declaring the death penalty unconstitutional.

Court Clerk Art Vanek said Miss Davis' chief counsel Howard Moore Jr. requested that she be freed on bail during a closed chambers hearing here Friday.

ARNASON said he had just received a copy of the high court opinion and would study it, listen to comments from defense and prosecution attorneys in chambers Wednesday and make a ruling, Vanek said. "In our opinion, the decision removes the single obstacle to setting bail in this case," said defense attorney Doris Brin Walker.

Miss Davis, 28, a Communist and former UCLA philosophy professor, is scheduled to stand trial Feb. 28 on murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges in the Aug. 7, 1970, shootout at the Marin County Civic Center in which four died.

She has been behind bars since her arrest in New York in October 1970 and has been repeatedly denied bail.

Mrs. Walker, who picked up a copy of the Supreme Court ruling in San Francisco, said Arnason already has found on the record that Miss Davis is "a good bail risk" except for a California Penal Code section which prohibits bail in capital cases where there is strong evidence is great.

or the presumption of guilt. If there are no more capital crimes, Mrs. Walker said, "then she becomes immediately eligible for bail."

EARLIER Friday, Santa Clara County Jury Commissioner Paul Steiling supervised the pulling of 1,000 names from a drum containing the names of 5,500 qualified jurors.

While Miss Davis, Arnason and representatives of the defense and prosecution watched, representatives from the jury commissioner's office then put the 1,000 names in a smaller tumbler and drew 150 names.

Steiling said the 150 will be called starting the middle of next week and told to stand by for possible jury duty in Miss Davis' trial.

2nd attack hoax at Oregon State

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Dist. Attn. James Brown said Friday a second phony assault report was uncovered in his investigation of the fatal stabbing of an Oregon State University coed.

Brown said a report by Debra D. Aasum, 18, also an OSU student, that she was attacked in a dressing room at Gill Coliseum was false.

Miss Aasum has admitted that no attack occurred as she was in the dressing room of the coliseum preparing for rehearsals for a show, the prosecutor said.

She said a man accidentally opened a door to the girls' restroom and left when he realized he was in the wrong area, Brown told newsmen.

The first hoax involved Michael Stinson, 20, a freshman at OSU from Ellensburg, Ore., who admitted he cut his own neck and then told police a man attacked him Feb. 9.

Miss Nancy Diane Wyckoff, 18, Glendale, Calif., was killed in her dormitory room on Feb. 8.

The district attorney said reports by two other young women who said they were attacked on the campus by a man before Miss Wyckoff's death apparently were true.

7 antiwar sailors convicted for 'missing' Vietnam trip

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Seven antiwar sailors who surrendered to naval authorities after their ship, the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk, left for Vietnam have been convicted of unauthorized absence and intentionally missing the ship's movement, the Navy said Friday.

The seven young men and two other sailors from the oiler Mispillion were flown to the Kitty Hawk Thursday after they took sanctuary in two San Diego churches.

The Mispillion sailors will be transferred to their ship when the Kitty Hawk catches up with it, a Navy spokesman said. They would face punishment from their captain, he said.

The Kitty Hawk crewmen appeared before Capt. Owen H. Oberg, commanding officer of the carrier. He ordered that they spend 30 days in custody, be dropped one pay grade and forfeit half of their pay for two months.

In notifying San Diego naval officials of his action, Oberg said he dismissed a desertion charge against the seven because they had surrendered voluntarily.

The Kitty Hawk sailors were identified as Gordon E. Cook, 19, Imperial Beach; Roy Hawkins, 22, Escalon; John E. Johnson, 22, Hawthorne; Todd Pisarek, 19, Auburn; David Aiken, 19, San Leandro, all Californians; Edward T. Mack, 19, Middleburg N.Y.; Ernest C. Ryder, 22, Hurst, Tex.

The crewmen of the Mispillion were identified as Kevin Kelly, 21, Cleveland, Ohio, and James G. Pobog, address and age not disclosed.

State Education Board gets school funds plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A $740 million school finance package containing a statewide property tax was agreed to Friday by members of a special commission of the State Board of Education.

The proposal would lower the average school property tax rate from the current $4.10 per $100 assessed valuation to $3. It will be presented to the state board next month at its regular meeting in Los Angeles.

Dr. Edwin Harper of the State Department of Education said that if the board approves the package it will sponsor legislation to try to implement the plan this year.

The plan is designed to meet the state Supreme Court decision which ruled California's system of school finance was unconstitutional because it relied too heavily on local property taxes.

The 33-member panel which drew up the proposal was appointed last November. It included Assemblyman Dixon Arnett, R-Redwood City, and Jim Dwight, deputy director of the State Department of Finance.

The complicated system proposed would guarantee every school district a minimum level of state support based on a statewide property tax of $2.50 in each district.

However, each local school board could raise the tax in their district to $3 without a vote of the people.

If they do, the state will raise the level of support to about $900 for each high school student and $725 for each elementary school student. This is approximately what the average school district now spends, and Harper said he expects most schools would use the $3 tax rate.

IN POORER districts, a $3 local tax rate would not raise enough money to actually support the school program. The difference between what is raised locally and what is spent will be supplied by the state.

In wealthy districts, the $3 rate will raise more than will be spent and the excess funds will be given to the state.

The excess from the wealthy districts, Harper said, will not be enough to provide the money needed to raise the level of state support for poor districts.

"If you just took from the rich and gave to the poor," he said, "you wouldn't have anywhere near enough money." So the state will have to provide up to $740 million in new state funds for education under the commission's proposal.

IF SCHOOL districts wish to go beyond the $3 tax rate, they will have to ask the voters to approve the move through an override election. The only exception would be in those districts which already are spending more than the state average.

UC medic student fee boost defeated

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Splitting along liberal-conservative lines, University of California regents voted 11 to 10 Friday to table temporarily a move to charge medical and dental students higher fees than other graduate students.

The proposal, which will be reconsidered in March, had failed the day before on a 5-to-5 tie vote in the regents' Finance Committee.

Gov. Reagan and his appointees generally favored the fee increase and voted against tabling. University President Charles Hitch and some more liberal regents opposed the increase and voted to table.

Prior to the meeting, about 30 sign-carrying UC employees tried to stop Reagan's car from entering a parking lot as he arrived.

Shouldered aside by police and Reagan aides, some of the demonstrators later followed the governor into the building, shouting, "We want raises."

The pickets were members of 15 university employee unions represented by the Central Labor Council of Alameda County, said spokesman Dick Groulx.

EPA accused of 'easing' clean air law for industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Angry, and his voice occasionally rising, Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., charged Friday that the Environmental Protection Agency had "emasculated" the 1970 Clean Air Law.

Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the Republican national chairman, said the charge was election year politics.

Through a series of letters, Eagleton sought to show that the White House had bowed to the copper industry and persuaded the EPA to back down on strong clean air standards for copper plants in Montana.

Equally annoyed and sometimes shouting back, EPA Administrator William D. Ruckelshaus testified the charges were "categorically false" and "greatly distorted."

RUCKELSHAUS was testifying before a Senate public works pollution subcommittee for a second day on the EPA's handling of air pollution controls.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, chief author of the 1970 Clean Air Law and subcommittee chairman, was campaigning in Florida for the Democratic presidential nomination. Eagleton, the fifth-ranking of the seven Democrats on the subcommittee and an announced Muskie supporter, conducted the hearings.

Republican committee members, led by Dole, sought to defend Ruckelshaus from Eagleton's questions.

Dole complained of "erroneous, misinformed and misleading charges" aimed at the administration and said the environmental issue is too important to waste time "contending with dummy problems."

"I recognize what year this is," Dole said. "There might be a tendency to just touch on politics from time to time . . ."

"Now that we've had this hearing — or trial — I find the defendant not guilty."

Eagleton charged that regulations promulgated by the EPA last August to implement the 1970 act "seriously weakened" the intent of the law to set tough, nationwide clean air standards.

He said the regulations failed to require limits for pollutant emissions or to make sure that air is not made dirtier. He said that for "some mysterious reason" requirements that the cost of pollution control to industry be considered had been added at the last minute contrary to pre-recommendations.

EAGLETON charged that "on at least one occasion" — the complex Montana case — presidential assistant Peter M. Flanagan "called the shots" at the EPA.

By GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing Editor

OAKLAND — The Clean Environment Act — hoax or savior of the environment — was debated Friday before California's Environmental Writers, but both friends and foes agreed the "drastic" legislation had a good chance of passage by California's voters.

"Its chances are excellent because we live in a climate where the people are profoundly disgusted with the failure of state and federal officials to act to protect the environment," admitted Dr. Thomas Lantos, chief spokesman for those opposing the act and a professor of economics at San Francisco State College.

The Clean Environment Act, officially the pollution initiative, is a constitutional initiative which will be on the California ballot in the June primary under the sponsorship of the People's Lobby.

It calls for what both sides describe as drastic controls of the environment including a ban on new offshore oil drilling, a five-year ban on construction of nuclear plants, and a tough rule on sulphur content of diesel fuels.

While the act is called the Clean Environment Act, the debate was anything but clean with charges of "liar" flying back and forth combined with accusations of conspiracy on the part of industry to kill the act.

The People's Lobby delegation headed by Edwin A. Koupal, director of the Lobby, told the California Academy of Environmental News Writers that the act would save the environment, while opponents, gathered by the public relations firm of Whitaker and Baxter, said it would wreck the economy and, what's more, not do any environmental good.

Lantos claimed that one provision in the act — a requirement that very low sulphur oil be used in diesel fuel — would cripple

L.A. awards contract for new dam

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Board of Water and Power Commissioners said Friday it had awarded a $9.5 million contract to Western Contracting Corp. of Sioux City, Iowa, to build a forebay dam near the Castaic hydroelectric power plant.

The earthfill dam, to be completed by June 1974, will impound up to 35,000 acre feet of California Aqueduct water to be used for power generation at the Castaic power facility.

the California Transportation system creating "catastrophic unemployment."

The San Francisco economist added he too favored environmental action but he wished the act had been "more carefully drawn."

In addition he claimed the act was a "class" act in that it would hurt most "those with low incomes, the minorities and the ethnic groups."

The People's Lobby spokesman conceded there might be some unemployment but they said it would not be as great as Lantos claimed.

"I have no idea how many people will be put out of work but some will be," said Dr. David Mage, professor of chemical engineering at San Jose State College, who spoke for the initiative.

The debate before 25 environmental writers, editorial writers and representatives of radio and television opened with Koupal calling Lantos a "liar" because of a dispute over whether the Sierra Club is backing the initiative.

Tom Harris, president of the Environmental Writers and conservation writer for the San Jose Mercury, ended that dispute when he noted that some individual chapters of the club have endorsed the initiative but the whole club has not yet acted.

The People's Lobby also charged that large oil companies including Standard Oil and other industrial groups are conspiring to kill the initiative with a $6-million fund channeled through Whitaker and Baxter, the public relations firm which arranged the opposition speakers at the meeting.

A representative of the firm, Michelle N. Abramson, declined to outline the firm's contract to fight the proposition saying the debate should concentrate on the merits or demerits of the Clean Environment Act.

The debate was set up by the California Environmental Writers because of continued and heated controversy over the initiative, with industry providing large sums of cash to fight it, while some conservation groups are making serious charges on the other side.

FDA proposes ban on clothes made with asbestos fibers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration Friday proposed a ban on the manufacture of clothing with asbestos fibers, which have long been associated with cancer of the lung and other organs. The agency decided, however, not to recall about 600,000 women's coats, made of an imported fabric containing 8 per cent asbestos fibers and marketed in late 1970.

FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said asbestos-containing garments, except those manufactured for fire fighters, "are hazardous substances." He said cautionary labeling would be "inadequate to protect the public health and safety."

Interested persons have 60 days to comment on the proposed regulations.

Asbestos has long been identified as a cancer-causing substance when inhaled in sufficient quantity, especially in industrial plants. However, the FDA said tests determine that the women's coats, even when subjected to harsh treatment, did not release enough airborne fibers to be considered an imminent hazard.

The FDA also announced the recall of contact-lens solution contaminated with bacteria, hormone solutions suspected of not being sterilized and pottery containing heavy metals.

The recalled products are: Sterile C-Clear contact-lens soaking solution and cleaner, manufactured by R M Laboratories Inc., Broomfield, Conn.; Progesterone Solutions and desoxycorticosterone acetate, supplied in bulk by International Hormones Inc., Hicksville, N.Y., and manufactured by Bel-Mar Laboratories, Inc., Inwood, N.Y.; and 6,000 glazed bowls manufactured by Americana Art China Co., Sebring, Ohio, for a Nabisco Cream of Wheat promotion.

In addition, the six per cent rate on savings investments in which you couldn't draw money for two years or more without loss—some part of the interest advantage.

The difference between five and six per cent may mean $25 a year.

Making six per cent on your plan would most likely mean paying more than $25 in income taxes on the total $300 of interest that 5½ per cent, deferred, would mean to you in the long run.

There is one avenue you could explore, however, goes beyond the standard savings account. You're running your own business — are self-employed, in other words — can achieve the tax shelter in a savings account for at least part of its savings.

Using the Keogh plan as employed person can realize up to 10 per cent of his net earned income each year, up to a maximum of $2,500 each year, and deduct from his taxable income the full amount set aside in such a plan. If he has employees, he can't set up such a plan unless he also covers all full-time nonseasonal employees who've been with him three years or more.

Within the Keogh setup you can invest the retirement fund in a number of ways, including mutual funds and insurance. What may interest you most, however, is that you can arrange a trustee plan with a savings bank or trust company and the institution can, at your direction, put your Keogh plan contributions into insured savings deposits.

The money you save through a Keogh plan escapes taxation until you retire, when your tax liability presumably is lower.

A word of caution: Using Keogh plan money before you reach 59½ years of age would open you to tax penalties, so it has to be money you need not touch before then.

Talk it over with your savings bank or trust company officer. I don't see why you couldn't, if self-employed, put together a savings program that included Series E bonds and Keogh plan savings, with taxes deferred on just about all of the amount.

Q. IN A recent column on stop orders left with the specialist, you said such open orders are reduced by the amount of the dividend or rights declared while the order stands in the specialist book.

That's abstruse and you should explain it. I've had several stocks on open order for a year now and I still get my dividends. So, under what circumstances can these dividends be withheld from me?

A. They can't. The statement I made had nothing to do with whether you receive dividends.

You obviously have an open order entered with your broker to sell stock if it reaches a specified price. Let's take an example. You own XYZ stock, trading at $45 a share. You'd like to take your profit if it goes to $50 or better. It goes into the specialist books.

Time passes. The order remains unfilled.

The company declares a quarterly dividend of 50 cents. You still own the stock; you get the dividend.

But the stock's market price is automatically reduced by 50 cents when it goes ex-dividend, so the limit on your open order on the book is automatically reduced to $49.50, also, to keep it in step with the price as adjusted for the ex-dividend.

If you're on the book for a year with that open order, your limit is reduced to $48 because of the $2 paid in dividends by the company. It's your limit price that's reduced.

Neither your ownership of the stock nor your receipt of the actual dividend is affected.

Death Row inmates 'jovial' Quentin warden dismayed

SAN QUENTIN (AP) —

The 102 men on the nation's most populous Death Row were "jovial" Friday when they heard by radio that the death penalty in California was struck down, the warden said.

"I was briefly disappointed," San Quentin Warden Louis Nelson told a news conference.

Nelson favors the death penalty.

Residents of Death Row kept a vigil by television and radio sets Thursday night and Friday morning when the court decision was due, Nelson said.

"The report is that they were jovial," Nelson said. Guards, however, "feel somewhat endangered by the action," he said.

"Personally, I felt the law should remain on the books," said Nelson, who has worked at the bayside prison off and on since 1951 and has been warden since 1967 — the last year a man died in San Quentin's apple green gas chamber.

Between 1893 and 1967, 409 men and women were gassed or hanged at San Quentin. Before that, county sheriffs carried out executions.

Those awaiting death on murder convictions included Sirhan B. Sirhan, convicted killer of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and cult leader Charles Manson, convicted in the slayings of actress Sharon Tate and six others.

Three of Manson's followers are among five women sentenced to death in California, they are confined at Corona in Southern California.

Nelson said he fears for Sirhan Sirhan's life inside the general prison population if the Jordanian immigrant is moved from his private cell on Death Row.

"Nothing has changed yet and will not change until we get word from the attorney general that no further avenues of litigation are open to them," Nelson said.

He said prison officials will decide later if Death Row inmates will be moved to other institutions or other parts of San Quentin.

Nelson added that without capital punishment some condemned men will become eligible for parole because "they may not be the same men one year or ten years from now."

STATE TO ASK REHEARING

Reagan, who has repeatedly criticized the courts, charged that the state Supreme Court "has placed itself above the will of the people."

In the Legislature, Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, introduced a proposed constitutional amendment which would, in effect, reinstate capital punishment in California.

His measure would give the Legislature specific authority to order capital punishment for certain crimes.

"THE ISSUE of whether or not we should have capital punishment has been debated in the Legislature for virtually every session for the past 35 years," he said. "The Legislature has refused to abolish capital punishment."

"I personally favor its retention because it has been well established that it does serve as a deterrent to some individuals."

There also was considerable expression of support for the court's decision.

Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, said it was "again a demonstration how far advanced the court is over the Legislature and the executive branch of government."

Bob Moretti, Assembly speaker, said it was "a courageous decision by the courts, acting as the conscience of the people of California."

A. L. WIRIN, chief counsel for the Southern California American Civil Liberties Union, expressed hope the ruling "will serve as a precedent for the U.S. Supreme Court to outlaw the death penalty for the entire nation."

But Associate Justice Marshall McComb, who cast the court's only dissenting vote, said he was "so upset" at the decision that he left San Francisco Thursday while the tribunal was still in session.

Warden Louis S. Nelson of San Quentin said he felt the death penalty should have remained on the books.

"I THINK the thought of being executed deterred some people from murder," he said. "When I heard of the Supreme

Six injured as bomb rips Minnesota state offices

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — A bomb explosion crumpled walls and shattered windows in the six-story Minnesota State Office Building Friday. At least six persons were injured. State police arrested two young suspects a few miles from the Capitol shortly after blast. They were described as white, in their early 20s, with long, shaggy hair.

"It definitely was a bomb," officials in the Department of Public Safety said. The State Crime Bureau was examining fragments and said they suspected back powder was used as the explosive.

Several thousand employees in the buildings of the state Capitol complex were ordered to evacuate after the explosion rocked the office building shortly before 2 p.m.

Officials received a telephone call about 3:15 p.m. saying there was a second bomb in the Capitol itself, located across the street from the office building, but a search of the Capitol and adjoining structures failed to turn up any more explosives.

The bomb went off in a delivery area inside the basement of the State Office Building.

It ripped holes in two concrete walls two feet thick, stripped plaster from the walls and twisted big steel support girders. Many windows were blown out.

Smoke and a smell reminiscent of exploded firecrackers spread through underground tunnels leading to the Capitol and the State Highway Department building.

Gov. Wendell Anderson, who was in his office in the Capitol when the bomb went off, called it a "wanton, senseless act of destruction."

U.S. to test warhead able to evade enemy missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is developing and will flight-test this year an experimental ballistic missile warhead capable of evading hostile antiballistic missiles, the Pentagon said Friday.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry Friedheim said work on the new evader warhead was prompted by concern that the Soviet SAM-5 surface-to-air missile, designed for use against airplanes, might also be able to play some type of antiballistic missile (ABM) role.

If this were the case, Friedheim said, it would give the Soviets "a sizable increase in their ABM capability." The Soviet Union now has the world's only deployed ABM system, a limited defense around Moscow, and is believed working on improvements.

Friedheim said Pentagon research chief Dr. John Foster has requested $40 million for work on the maneuverable warhead in next year's defense budget. Another defense spokesman said $8.5 million was spent on the project last year and $33.6 million is being spent this year.

"We have been working in this area for several years and Dr. Foster indicates we are going to continue that work," Friedheim said. "It is an advanced program, in the very early stages of our research and developments efforts, and is not by any manner or means a production program."

He said money requested for the program would go toward "analyses, hardware, contracts, development and testing of guidance and control systems, and flight tests of evasion maneuvering vehicles."

Friedheim said he could not discuss how the very highly classified new warhead would work. But another Pentagon source said "it's a warhead that wiggles," allowing it to dodge antiballistic missiles.

As such, the development would constitute more of an advanced penetration aid than a new and more powerful warhead. Foster indicated as much when he revealed the project with a brief reference in his annual defense research and development report to Congress Thursday.

"Because of our current lack of knowledge concerning exactly what the Soviets are doing with their terminal ABM (research) programs, we have examined what the U.S. might do that would be least sensitive to any of the alternatives believed possible for the Soviets," he said.

At the moment, the necessity for putting the maneuverable warhead atop America's operational ballistic missiles appears remote. But Pentagon researchers want to develop the warhead, test it fully and have it ready to adapt quickly to U.S. land-based Minuteman missiles and sea-based Poseidon missiles if the need ever occurs.

Scientist says ABM system blunder, but best U.S. has

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top government nuclear scientist said Friday the nation was stuck with a "cobbled up" antiballistic missile system as a result of a major blunder at its inception.

Dr. Harold Agnew, one of the developers of the atomic bomb and director since 1943 of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, said he was backing the Safeguard ABM because it was the only hardware the Defense Department could provide today.

But, in a letter to three senators, he said the cold facts are that for reasons I won't attempt to explain and probably couldn't anyway, our scientific leaders' made a very bad blunder some years ago and have been redoubling their efforts through every means possible to make their decision appear to be correct."

AGNEW defended Safeguard in the long and bitter scientific debate that preceded its narrow approval by Congress in 1969.

But he said he had always felt that the United States should have developed a different kind of system—one with smaller, cheaper radars that would be more difficult for the enemy to destroy. That type of system called Hardsite, is now under development by the Defense Department, but is years away from production.

I have always said I would only field a system which is now vaguely called Hardsite and into which we hopefully are backing," Agnew said. Sen. Stuart Symington might say, "Harold, why the hell did you defend Safeguard if you believe in Hardsite?" My answer remains that I believe in ABM and a cobbled up Safeguard is the only hardware DOD (the Department of Defense) can provide today. I believe that if we kill Safeguard we kill ABM, and that I believe would be wrong."

AGNEW's quarrel with the ABM was that it was developed in the 1960s to fulfill the mission of protecting the nation's cities from a Soviet strike. The system, then called Sentinel, consisted of radars, computers and interceptor missiles stationed on the outskirts of major cities to destroy incoming enemy missiles before they reached their targets.

Shortly after he took office, President Nixon changed the mission of the ABM to the protection of Minuteman missile silos from a pre-emptive Soviet knockout strike. The name was changed to Safeguard, but the hardware—including Spartan and Sprint interceptors—remained the same.

Agnew said the protection of the Minuteman force should have been the ABM's role all along and the hardware should have been designed specifically for that purpose.

INSTEAD, he said, the secretary of defense, "prescribed that a 'camel' be constructed. The 'emperor' of that time didn't have any clothes on and yet his operations analysts could consistently prove that he did and still are trying to prove that he did."

CARGO TO MOVE

were being stuffed into a box.

The 122 shipping companies in the PMA have scheduled a ratification vote in San Francisco this afternoon.

If majority union approval is not won at major locals at 24 ports from San Diego to Seattle, the proposal goes to a second ballot. This requires two-thirds approval coastwide.

The proposal provides a 72-cent-an-hour pay increase to $5 retroactive to Dec. 26 and another 40 cents an hour starting July 1. The proposed contract runs through July 1973.

Longshoremen first walked off the job last July 1, but were ordered back for an 80-day period that ended Christmas Day when the White House obtained a Taft-Hartley injunction. The union continued to work after the injunction expired and then walked out again last month.

The strike has caused nearly $2 billion in losses to countless businesses and farms that rely on Pacific shipping, economists say.

UNDER the contract Bridges has said longshoremen are free to strike again if the Pay Board refuses to approve the 16 per cent pay boost.

AFL-CIO President George Meany predicted in Miami Beach, Fla., that there would be a resumed strike if the Pay Board tries to whittle down the increase. Meany was one of five labor members on the board outvoted when the board rejected a 12 per cent wage settlement for aerospace workers.

JOHN, CAROLYNN MAC MILLAN — ARMS FULL OF LOVE
Their Premature Twin Girls Beat the Odds

Twins survive, strive, beat odds and thrive

They rejoiced at Lakewood General Hospital Friday. The MacMillan twins had made it — survived. The baby girls are now "happy and thriving" in the words of one doctor.

But the odds were against the youngsters at the start.

The twin girls were born seven weeks premature.

First to arrive on the scene was Carrie Marie. She weighed in at 1 pound, 15 ounces.

The other wee one, her sister Cammi Marie, tipped the scales at a mere 1 pound, 14 ounces.

Like any other babies, they lost weight before they started gaining.

Cammi Marie dropped to 1 pound 10 ounces and Carrie Ann dipped to 1 pound 11½ ounces. Both finally started gaining weight last Dec. 1.

THEY WERE BORN Nov. 26. They weren't due until Jan. 13, doctors said.

The parents, John and Carolyn MacMillan, were told they could take the girls home Friday. The family resides at 1975-S W. 19th St., Long Beach.

Mrs. MacMillan, only 17 years old when her pregnancy was discovered, almost lost the babies at 26 weeks, her obstetrician reported. Reason: an obstetrical complication.

But surgical treatment enabled her to carry them until the 33rd week, at which time she was allowed to deliver.

Both girls entered the world "double footling," a type of breech presentation, the obstetrician said.

Dr. Paul M. Kegan, the girls' pediatrician, said the babies had a number of close calls.

"Both suffered two episodes of aspiration pneumonia," he said.

This is a lung inflammation caused by breathing formula into the lungs, he explained.

Several times the babies "forgot to breathe while being fed" and had to be resuscitated, Kegan said.

Mrs. Iris Klapprich, R.N., in charge of the nursery at Lakewood General, said the babies, during their earlier stages of development, "couldn't eat and breathe at the same time."

"THEY FORGOT to do one or the other," she said. "They were lazy babies."

But lazy babies can cause a lot of anxious moments.

All that's past.

"They're doing beautifully now," Mrs. Klapprich said. "Cammi is pushing 6 pounds, and Carrie should be 5 pounds 15 ounces by discharge time."

The family obstetrician, who asked that his name not be used, was as proud as the parents.

He asked only one favor — a plug for the importance of medical teamwork.

"It shows you that we can do big things in a small hospital," he said.

Council asked to back tax-aid amendment

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Long Beach councilmen have been asked by Supervisor Burton W. Chace to support a proposed state constitutional amendment to "bring about the kind of property-tax relief our constituents so desperately need."

The amendment, Chace explained, would accomplish two things:

—It would take the cost of the federal and state-dictated social welfare program off property taxes.

—It would require the state to provide revenue, other than ad valorem property taxes, for any mandated state services carried out by a city or county.

Councilmen will be asked at the meeting next Tuesday to formally endorse the amendment.

"Unfortunately, the county has no control or right of innovation as far as the social welfare program is concerned," Chace wrote.

"This program cost Los Angeles County taxpayers $285 million last year, and the costs seem to escalate each year."

"Removing this charge from property taxes would bring about massive, instant property-tax relief," Chace declared.

THE SUPERVISOR said the amendment also would "halt the trend of the past several years" of the state requiring more and more services by cities and counties without providing any funds to carry out such services.

Chace said he hopes the State Legislature will place the constitutional amendment on the ballot for the people to vote on. He said it is sponsored by the California Supervisors Association and has the "unanimous support" of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

L.B. disaster drill draws fire for 'lack of realism'

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Long Beach staged a city-wide hospital drill Friday that drew criticism from the younger generation because of its lack of realism.

And two Long Beach physicians backed up the youngsters in their beefs.

The censure came from some of the 400 Long Beach City College students who posed as victims of an imaginary earthquake.

"I WAS SUPPOSED to be unconscious," wrote one student in a critique. "But they asked me my name, address, age and symptoms."

Another said: "I was crying for my mother — at the staging area in Veterans Memorial Stadium — and a fireman said, 'Shut up before I smack you one!'"

And another said: "I had to tell the ambulance driver how to get to the hospital."

Dr. George Wong Jr., former chief of staff at Pacific Hospital of Long Beach, who visited the staging area early in the two-hour drill, said that many students contended the adults involved in the emergency exercise didn't "take it as seriously as they should."

WONG said he was told that "the only ones who really hustled were the guys with the orange hats."

Those would be Explorer Scouts — Long Beach Emergency Medical Unit members and members of the local Search and Rescue Team.

A Navy doctor, Cmdr. Nicholas Broussard of Long Beach Navy Hospital, said that as far as he was concerned, the stars of the show were "A 15- or 16-year-old boy and a young girl who were working as stretcher-bearers."

"Those kids were the professionals out there today."

The early morning chill created a couple of problems, including one real emergency.

At the helicopter landing pad at Emergency Preparedness headquarters, 4040 E. Spring St., one of the participants was suspected of suffering a heart attack.

She was identified as Mrs. Alice Burmeister, 51, of 2032 Britton Drive, Long Beach, a nursing student at City College.

Chief Warrant Officer 2 Harold L. Lindamood of the Army National Guard said his "Huey" helicopter had just been loaded with four simulated patients when the emergency occurred.

The UH-1C helicopter was quickly unloaded and Mrs. Burmeister was put aboard, pilot Lindamood said. Accompanying her on the flight was Dr. Shakeeb Ede, director of medical education at Memorial Hospital Medical Center.

"We flew straight to Memorial," said Lindamood. "It took one minute and a half."

Mrs. Burmeister was held for observation in the emergency room at Memorial, where doctors said her electrocardiogram was normal. Ede said she appeared to have been a victim of the chilly weather.

She was discharged from the hospital later in the day.

Dr. Marvin S. Kaplan, a surgeon at Long Beach Veterans Administration Hospital, said all the student participants sent to the VA — 44 of them — appeared to be cold.

Even the blood ran cold.

Jim dePriest of the theater arts department at City College said the 40 members of his department prepared 10 gallons of fake blood to paint onto "casualties." The blood was made with Rit dye and beet juice, dePriest said.

"It's cold," shrieked more than one coed when makeup artists applied the blood.

THE FAKE BLOOD applied to one coed didn't shake her—but the girl became visibly upset when a makeup artist instructed her to "mess up your hair so that you'll look like you're really injured."

A near-casualty was Dr. Jerry Hughes, disaster-scene chairman who heads emergency services at St. Mary's Hospital. When he started to dispense a limited number of helicopter tickets, he was mobbed.

Hughes, a former Green Beret, was startled by the stampeding students.

Three National Guard helicopters and one chopper from the Coast Guard made three to five trips to Memorial Hospital and to Long Beach Naval Hospital.

AT LONG BEACH Community Hospital, there was a mixup in the internal emergency code, and radioactive control personnel appeared in the emergency room with radiation counters.

Evar P. Peterson, coordinator of emergency preparedness for the city, praised the efforts of participants and said "it should be comforting to Long Beach people to know that this city is ready to make an effort of this type in a meaningful way."

Among those who participated in the drill were the Long Beach Police Department, Fire Department, lifeguards, Red Cross, Long Beach Unified School District, three private ambulance services, National Guard, Coast Guard, Office of Emergency Preparedness, Long Beach Health Department, Explorer Scout units, Long Beach Airport control tower operators and seven Long Beach hospitals.

Destroyer, veteran of 3 wars, decommissioned

The destroyer O'Brien, a 28-year-old veteran of three wars, was decommissioned Friday in ceremonies at Pier 6 at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

Cmdr. W. N. Campbell, the vessel's captain, read the decommissioning orders to the crew, a trumpet sounded "Retreat" and "Taps," the colors were lowered and the O'Brien became a memory to the 10,000 sailors who served aboard her.

The ship's last port of call will be the Inactive Facility at San Diego.

CATHOLICS TO SHUT SCHOOL

Parents of Marymount Catholic High School students in Palos Verdes Peninsula have been told the school will be closed in June and students are to be transferred to nearby Marymount Junior College.

Closure of the high school was announced in a letter to parents after an emergency meeting of Marymount personnel and the school's board of regents.

The consolidation of the two schools occurred as a result of money problems and a shortage of religious personnel on the staff, a high school official said.

Ted Bear Jr., president of the board of regents described the consolidation as an opportunity for a "better total education."

Only two of the 15 members of the Marymount High School faculty are members of religious orders.

Marymount Junior College has students in grades 11 through 14. Students earn college credits while completing high school and some are able to eliminate a semester of college.

Doctor convicted of marijuana possession

A 46-year-old San Pedro physician, arrested last Dec. 5 by police investigating a burglary at his office, was convicted Friday on a charge of possession of marijuana.

The defendant, Dr. Ralph K. Korljan, of 3408 Anchovy Drive, had been arraigned in San Pedro Municipal Court on a charge of possession of marijuana for sale. But Long Beach Superior Court Judge Carroll M. Dunnham — with the agreement of defense and prosecution attorneys — found him guilty of the lesser charge.

The judge set March 17 for a probation hearing and sentencing. Korljan is free on $5,000 bond.

Harbor Division officers, who made the arrest, said they seized more than 173 grams of marijuana and a quantity of marijuana cigarettes at Korljan's office, 670 W. Sixth St.

Burglars get $250

Burglars who entered by removing a window screen took $250 in cash from the apartment of Robert L. Huffman, 220 Belmont Ave., Long Beach police said Friday.

Statewide homemaker service for aged urged

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

The former head of the state employment office in Long Beach recommended Friday that California establish a statewide homemaker service to meet the needs of thousands of ailing and elderly persons who can't otherwise take care of themselves.

In doing so, said George Toll, the state would also solve the problem of unemployment among thousands of other persons over 45 who could work in the program.

Toll, now chairman of the Long Beach Committee on Aging, a division of the Long Beach Planning Council, made his recommendation to members of the State Legislature's Joint Committee on Aging.

THE PANEL, which met in Long Beach's City Council chambers, heard about 20 witnesses in the first of a series of scheduled hearings on nursing homes and alternative care for the aging. The second hearing will be held in San Diego March 10.

Assemblyman Leo T. McCarthy, D-San Francisco, earlier credited the Independent Press-Telegram with helping to trigger the hearings, pointing to a series of articles on nursing homes by former I.P.T. writer Barbara Fryer in May, 1970, and a series on the aged by reporter Joanne Norris late last year.

McCarthy, chairman of the panel, was joined at the hearing by Sen. Joseph Kennick, D-Long Beach, and Sen. Peter Behr, R-Marin County. Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, although not a member of the committee, sat in on the hearing and participated in the questioning.

Toll told the committee that "thousands of so-called older workers could be employed throughout the state if a universal homemaker service for the chronically ill were provided."

The service, moreover, would ease the pressure on nursing homes and convalescent hospitals by keeping many senior citizens in their own homes for months and possibly years.

The committee also heard details of a successful homemaker program that lasted three years in Long Beach before private and public funding was cut off. Under the program, which was headed by Lucy Still, 17 homemaker aides served 318 households from two weeks to two years, helping the aged and the ailing with such chores as shopping, cleaning and cooking.

THE SENSITIVE question of nursing home care elicited a series of statements in defense of the homes. Representatives of the industry insisted that the state's "failure to adequately reimburse" the nursing homes for the care of Medi-Cal patients is largely, if not solely, responsible for the ills besetting the industry.

The state pays nursing homes a maximum of $14 a day — and usually less — for the care and treatment of Medi-Cal recipients.

But at those rates, said the nursing home spokesmen, the homes cannot possibly provide adequate care and skilled services without trying to make it up in high rates for private patients.

Those facilities that depend largely on Medi-Cal reimbursements, they said, are beginning to fail by the wayside, unable to keep up with rising costs.

"IF DRASTIC revisions (in the reimbursement rates) are not made," declared Joni Baker, director of nursing services at Marlinda Nursing Home in Lynwood, "I can only foresee that many or most of our better nursing homes will also go down the drain."

Mrs. Baker and other nursing home spokesmen also privately lamented the poor public image of the homes, asserting that expose articles on the worst of them had given the entire industry an undeserved black eye.

The committee also heard two women testify that their relatives had suffered poor treatment and indignities in several nursing homes. And one woman who was scheduled to testify said she had personally witnessed "a lot of cruel treatment in a Long Beach convalescent hospital," where her husband was a patient.

GARDENING

By JOE LITTLEFIELD

Visit a nursery and see the Billbergia nutans, blooming now.

This is the most common of Billbergias. It has showy flowers in the winter season and can be grown in gardens or in containers indoors.

Billbergia is a genus of the Bromeliaceae family which is known as the pineapple family, of which Ananas sativus produces the edible popular tropical fruit — pineapples.

Billbergia nutans is a stemless air plant with roots that grow in loamy soil in the ground or in pots. They'll grow in more sun than shade except in hot, dry areas. They grow rank in shade. The 12 inches or so finely toothed incurved green leaves form a bowl to the base of the plant. Each cluster of four-to-eight bell-shaped, blue-edged green blossoms with pink bracts is attractive and showy. The plants absorb the water that is poured into the bowls, whereas the plant soil is watered much less frequently.

There's a number of distinctly showy Billbergias of which B. saundersii hybrid, with purplish-bronze leaves, heavily spotted with cream color, has rich blue flowers with bright red bracts. B. pyramidalis, with stiff, broad, rich-green leaves, has an erect inflorescence (the budding unfolding head of blossoms) rising several inches above the foliage. The flowers are tipped with blue, forming a spectacular head.

Aechmea is another genus of bromeliads. Aechmea fasciata leafage appears as if dusted with a whitish powder. The gorgeous pink blossoms' head lasts for nearly half a year. This is the one that flowered during last Christmas season. Plants were desirable holiday gifts for indoors, greenhouse, or patio.

One of the most helpful bromeliads-in-color books on the market is a compilation from the bulletins of the Bromeliad Society edited by Victoria Padilla. It may be found in some local libraries, and book stores. In addition to the detailed information on the plants and culture care of Bromeliads, there are 59 color plates, 45 black and white photos, plus generous illustrations.

Camellias are unselfish winter blooming shade shrubs. Two camellia problems nearly always pop up during the winter at lectures, and from our garden columns readers. The first is, "What causes camellia buds to brown and drop off?" The answer is in two parts. Some very few varieties, luckily for all home gardeners, are known to be bad bud droppers. Pink Perfection camellia is one of them. One of the primary answers from camellia hobbyists is, "P. Perfection camellia produces so many buds, that all the buds cannot possibly survive and bloom." Many of the gardeners heavily disbud this particular variety, still there's a heavy drop. Pink Perfection camellia will hold many more buds that bloom if the plant grows in lots of sun. We've also seen this variety grow in heavy shade. When the plant is seven years or older, only about 30 to 40 per cent of the buds stay on to blossom.

Authorities agree that when dependable blooming camellias drop buds, one of the causes may be that the plants were watered erratically as the buds were forming and during their development.

A variety that is a bad bud dropper is Eureka camellia. Even if it were a good bloomer you'd want to pass it up. Gardener rarely finds it at nurseries. It might be sold through other outlets and a seemingly economical price. We wouldn't accept it as a gift.

One of the older varieties of the Japonica camellias that is an "eye catcher" is Carolyn Tuttle camellia, a gorgeous large peony form. The wavy leaves are smaller than some of the other varieties, allowing the gorgeous salmon-coral-pink blossoms to show off better. An established plant given normal care blooms abundantly. Our plant gets almost three hours of morning sun and loves it.

Q. — My husband and I drove down to see the Queen Mary. On the way we were impressed by the flowers on the freeway. I have checked several nurseries in vain. We would appreciate the name and where it could be purchased. Mrs. R. O. Devine.

A. — Not having yet visited the Queen, I don't know what kind of ground cover is on the freeway. Will you please cut several branches of it, wrap a portion of moistened napkin around the branch cut ends, then wrap it in plastic (thin) and mail it to the Press-Telegram. They'll forward it to me.

Orange Show in view

Cerritos College freshman Lori Salo, 18, will compete with 49 other Southland beauties for the title of California Citrus Queen at the National Orange Show in San Bernardino May 18-29. She bears the title "Miss Norwalk" and will be sponsored by that city.

JOBS TO DO NOW

Curled, distorted leaves of citrus, camellias or other plants indicates aphids attacked those leaves when they were in bud form. The gardener must spray plants when aphids first are discovered on the leaf buds, not after the pests have disappeared. Watch closely for aphids.

Raggedy fern fronds, on ferns that have a crown area at soil line where the fronds grow out, should be cut off at the crown.

Watch the deciduous fruit tree buds. Spray with fungicide spray just as the buds begin to burst open.

Start tuberous begonias in a flat of moistened peat moss mixed with sand. Space the bulbs six inches apart and place the curved part of the bulb down into the rooting medium.

Japanese peonies should be planted in half shade in mild areas, and in shade in hotter sectors.

Challenges seen as spinoff from Vietnam war

Draft exemption for ministers, and role of chaplains in military are questioned

By LES RODNEY

Should ministers be exempt from the military draft?

Should chaplains be part of the military establishment, drawing their pay from the military rather than from the church?

In a time of rough questioning of many things which have been uncritically accepted, it should come as no surprise that America's clergymen are not immune.

Under low-keyed but persistent probing are the draft-exempt status of clergies, and their role as government-paid chaplains. These two historic phenomena have been, and still are, widely accepted and unquestioned by the general public, religious and otherwise. The stirrings come from within the church itself.

ALTHOUGH apparently unrelated, both can be seen, without much effort, as stemming from the Vietnam war, that unprecedented and traumatic experience which has called so many things into question. Supporters of both attacks have in common the feeling that men of God ought not to be beholden to civil government for special favors.

Taking them one at a time:

Exempting ministers from the draft is a long-standing practice in this country, as in most other Western lands.

It came under attack two years ago at the convention of the North American Council of the World Alliance of Reformed and Presbyterian Churches, a major world Protestant grouping, though not widely known outside church circles in the U.S. At the meeting, Rev. Dr. David G. Colwell, a well-known United Church of Christ pastor and leader, once top man in the attempt to unite nine Protestant denominations, a former Yale fullback star whom we found to be unafraid of controversy when we interviewed him once in Long Beach, said ministers ought to get out of their "privileged position" of being immune from the draft. The council, after debate, voted that way.

The point which carried the day was that clergymen should confront the same tough decisions of life as the people they minister to, in order to have the moral and psychological credentials to tackle the subject.

One opposing point of view, quite obviously, would hold that putting men of God in the same category as others in the draft would tend to disrupt religious life, at a time, moreover, when many feel it is more needed than ever.

The argument to end ministerial draft exemption is now being pushed by others, notably Jesuits, who are no strangers to "boat rocking" questions.

WRITING in the national Jesuit weekly America,

INDEPENDENT PRESS TELEGRAM

RELIGION

INDEPENDENT, PRESS-TELEGRAM-B-3
Long Beach, Calif., Sat., Feb. 19, 1972

Rev. Peter T. Riga, a theologian at St. Mary's College of California, echoes the Colwell position that exemption shields clerics from having to face realistically "one of the most agonizing problems" other may go through, and goes deeper into ultimate questions by asking:

"Why should it be considered nefarious for the clergy to spill blood and not for other Christians...?"

Eliminating the exemption for ministers, Father Riga maintains, would "force them to evaluate their vocation" and their position would be "Genuinely lived," in contrast to the "pious mouthings of a stringent nationalism so common among the clergy."

And those clerics deciding for military service, he says, will "have taken the logic of their position to its proper conclusions, fighting and killing in the cause of God's justice alongside Christians whom they bless and encourage to do the fighting and killing."

Another Jesuit, Rev. Raymond Jancauskas of Detroit, writes that "the clergy lack authenticity when the time comes for action, and the privilege of such heroism is left to the nonclergy."

A Lutheran who ran for Congress as a "dove," Rev. Richard Neuhaus of New York, writing in the Lutheran Forum, says "The church's witness for peace is weakened because its ministers do not have to come directly to terms with the problem of taking part in war."

"Governments of other times and nations," Neuhaus adds, "have exploited the expedient of bestowing special privileges to buy off the church's conscience and to gain the implicit sanction of religious silence. The policy of letting sleeping clerics lie is not an American invention."

FATHER RIGA recognizes that opposition to such a drastic change would be strong both among church people and in government. The latter, he claims, would not like "its traditional allies — the clergy — slowly opting for absolute or relative pacifism as citizens."

Not to offer here an editorial opinion on the merits of the proposal to end clergy draft exemption, but factually, it seems that Riga, and Neuhaus, overstate the alleged docile conformity of the American clergy. If the government has had "the implicit sanction of religious silence" from its "traditional allies," the clerics, then what in the world has the uproar been about within the church during the Vietnam war? Who besides religious leaders have an earlier record of raising searching questions about the war?

The basic error is to think of clerics — or any other large grouping of Americans for that matter — as being of one mind. Though there is a special calling, ministers and rabbis are still men in a free-thinking society. If you make the rounds of Long Beach pastors you will find roughly the same divisions on Vietnam as in the general population. With the exception of those who feel that they, as ministers, and the church should never enter the field of national policy. These ministers, however, are but one section of the American church.

Another criticism of the proposal to end draft exemptions is the apparent assumption that there are no ministers with enough caliber and insight to address themselves empathetically to problems they have not personally lived through. Is it proposed that a minister must have been pregnant before having the credentials to counsel with a young mother?

None of which is to say that there is no value in bringing such interesting questions as draft exemption for ministers front and center for examination.

CHAPLAINS: 2 MASTERS?

SECOND QUESTION: The propriety of military chaplains getting their keep from the military service is not a new one. It has come to the forefront again with publication of "Military Chaplains," a book sponsored by Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam, a religious anti-war group. The book is a collection of essays on the topic, edited by Harvard theologian Harvey Cox.

Edward B. Fiske in the New York Times, calling the chaplaincy the "two masters" problem, poses the question: "Can a clergyman in uniform go about serving both God and country and keep the two in their proper places?"

Chaplains are nominated by their denominations, but once they're "in" they are part of the military, dependent upon it for pay, promotion, pension, etc. The pay is usually well above what they would receive in civilian life. Fiske says, and adds that about four out of five chaplains elect to stay in the service as a career.

There are currently 3,677 chaplains from the three major faiths on active duty with the Army, Navy and Air Force. Most religious bodies cooperate with the program, feeling that men in the Armed Forces are entitled to pastoral services the same as anyone else.

And so say the courts of the land, whenever the arrangement has been challenged on the issue of separation of church and state. The courts have upheld the constitutionality of clerics on the federal payroll on the ground that failure to provide chaplains would deprive servicemen of their right to free exercise of religion.

ST. MARY'S RIGA
Privileged Position

The National Association of Laymen in the Catholic Church, a small gadfly liberal group, has urged creation of a civilian chaplain corps with rights of access to the men similar to those given to journalists and Red Cross Workers.

THIS IS not likely to win support from the denominations. The United Church of Christ estimates it would cost $13.5 million annually to support its present chaplains. The Jewish Welfare Board, which has to supplement its 46 active chaplains with trained laymen, says it would be priced out of the market.

One denomination that does pay for and maintain a civilian chaplaincy, the small, conservative Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, still relies on the military for its billing and transportation. Says the Army chief of chaplains, Gerhard W. Hyatt: "It is not a matter of whether or not to accept government support, it is merely a question of how much."

Chaplains in favor of the present system point out that anyone outside the service would not have the same clout to intercede on behalf of servicemen with problems.

Another opponent of switching to a civilian chaplaincy, United Presbyterian official L. William Yelton, who has been critical of "Hawkish" chaplains, says one result of a civilian chaplaincy would be "military bases flooded with fundamentalist groups seeking to convert servicemen."

Proposals that have been advanced for giving chaplains a non-military image include 1: removing all but religious symbols from their uniform, thus suggesting that their responsibility to God takes precedence over their loyalty to the military, and 2: Putting performance ratings, promotions and pensions in the hands of ecclesiastical rather than military officials so as to avoid situations where criticism of national or military policies might endanger career advancement.

The dilemma that can confront a chaplain is set forth by Chaplain William J. Hughes, a Methodist now at White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico, who says in "Military Chaplains."

"Fourteen months ago I landed in South Vietnam. I was opposed to our involvement then. I am even more firmly opposed to it now. During these long months, I have been silent on this issue in my preaching. I have done this deliberately because I genuinely felt that I and my men should not, indeed could not, oppose this war from within the area of conflict. I have honored our dead, comforted our wounded, and admonished, encouraged, or consoled."

"On the other hand, I have done what I could to bring our involvement here to a quicker end... I have written and spoken to both prominent and ordinary citizens."

"Should I stay in the Army as a United Methodist chaplain? Some feel there is no room for me within the military. They feel in all honesty that I am hypocritical and false. Some have encouraged me to resign, while others with perhaps a bit less love have denounced me as a fraud."

Hughes favors a five-year limit to the chaplain's term as a way of avoiding what he calls a "career military" mentality.

A LONG BEACH pastor who served three years as a Navy chaplain, including a year with a river assault flotilla in Vietnam's Mekong Delta, comments that most of the chaplains he encountered were men of God "who loved to serve, and didn't feel someone over them telling them how to serve."

Rev. Nathan O. Loesch, of Bethany Lutheran Church, who received three medals during his Vietnam stint, adds that it can be said that a minister in a civilian parish may yield some of his convictions to accord with the church board.

"It depends on the individual minister, in either case," he says.

Loesch recalls one time in Vietnam when he and some of his men prayed for the Vietcong. "You might think someone in command might object to that," he says, "though I feel that as Christians we ought to pray for our enemies too. 'Well, I got no guff on that from anyone.'"

"In fact, I personally never felt a command push

Nixon trip is hailed by most church leaders, hit by some

By G. W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

After urging such a step for years, leaders of most major churches are firmly behind President Nixon in his trip to Communist China. They say it can strengthen the cause of world peace.

"He has our prayers," says Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America, voicing hope that the two nations may be at a turning point toward growth in mutual understanding instead of belligerence.

Similar reactions have come from many other religious leaders, who have long advocated opening doors of communication with China, often being sharply denounced for it in the past by critics.

At the same time, some American religious elements strongly oppose the trip.

"A great disaster for the free world," says Rev. Carl McIntire, radio preacher, who for months has been organizing rallies in various cities to protest the mission.

Calling the new approach a result of a presidential "policy of retreat, appeasement and soft talk of peace," he says: "Yalta was a surrender. Potsdam was a defeat. Peking will be a disaster."

A group of smaller denominations, the American Council of Christian Churches, also has opposed the visit with "the murderous rulers of Red China."

From a different angle, Rev. Richard L. Riesing, an American Baptist international affairs official, claims the trip's aim is to "defuse the peace movement in this country" and to use in Nixon's re-election campaign.

A conservative Roman Catholic weekly, Twin Circle, also has criticized the trip, saying it signals accommodation with Chinese communism which will "damage America's image in Asia" and make the years ahead "fraught with setbacks and sorrows."

The nation's Roman Catholic bishops, a year ago, commended the administration for its "continuing efforts to develop workable relations with the people of mainland China."

"In any global approach to the problems of peace and human welfare, the real and potential magnitude of the People's Republic of China cannot be ignored," the bishops said.

Pope Paul VI also has hailed the trip as "something big and new... that could in no small way change the face of the earth."

Dr. Cynthia Wedel, president of the National Council of Churches, including most major Protestant and Orthodox denominations, has commended the President for his "initiative toward normalizing" relations with China.

In 1966, the council had urged U.S. support for seating mainland China in the United Nations and also a study of regularizing diplomatic relations with China — a stand that brought a flood of denunciations. More than 25,000 letters poured in on council headquarters, protesting its action, as did a tide of pamphlets circulated in the country, along with attacks by many broadcasting commentators. The first major denomination to recommend diplomatic relations with China was the United Church of Christ, in 1961, followed by most larger church bodies.

Although the Southern Baptist Convention has not taken such a stand, its former president, Rev. Dr. W. A. Criswell, of Dallas, says he supports the presidential mission.

"It is unthinkable that we could blind our eyes to the fact that Red China is here," he said, noting that its people make up a fourth of the world's population.

2,000 expected in Bellflower

Prophecy featured in Baptist meet

Some 2,000 persons from the United States and foreign countries are expected to attend the annual mid-winter meeting of the Baptist Bible Fellowship, Monday through Thursday at Calvary Baptist Church of Bellflower, 14722 Clark Ave.

Host pastor Rev. Dr. H. Frank Collins reports that no major business will be conducted, with emphasis instead on Biblical prophecy. Subjects to be covered at the morning and evening sessions include: Return of the Jews to Palestine; the Physical Rapture of the Christian; The Coming War with Russia; Signs of the Return of Christ; The Anti-Christ and His Mark; and Evangelism, the New Testament and the False Church During the Apostate Age.

The Baptist Bible Fellowship International was formed in 1950 in Fort Worth, Texas, as a strongly conservative, Bible-centered fellowship. Its recent figures list almost 2,100 is claimed in membership, with 319 missionaries supported in 32 countries, and two U.S. Bible colleges.

Keynote speaker Monday night will be Rev. Parker Dailey, pastor of Blue Ridge Baptist Temple in Kansas City, Mo., and president of the Fellowship. Tuesday night's speaker will be Rev. Dr. Jack Van Impe, who claims to know the entire New Testament from memory. In an article in the Detroit Free Press, he was said to be seen by some as a young Billy Graham, but Van Impe himself says he seeks sponsorship only from conservative fundamental churches.

Wednesday night's speaker will be Rev. Dr. Wendell Zimmerman, pastor of Jacksonville (Fla.) Baptist Temple. Windup speaker Thursday will be churches, including eight of the 10 largest Sunday Schools in the nation, according to Christian Life magazine. Some 1.5 million

Rev. Dr. Art Wilson, a former pastor of the host church, now an evangelist and president of National Church Aid Assn.

Guest speaker Tuesday morning at 11 a.m. will be Dr. Clyde M. Narramore, a former consultant psychologist for 14 years on the staff of the Los Angeles County Superintendent of Schools, now president of the Narramore Christian Foundation and Rosemead Graduate School of Psychology.

Morning sessions start at 9, and evening sessions at 7, with music each night. Delegates will have afternoons free for sightseeing.

Prescription for gloomy moods

By NORMAN V. PEALE

A young woman consulted me saying she was thinking of leaving her husband. Life with him she claimed was becoming intolerable and she just couldn't take it much longer. She had "had it!"

"What's the matter with your husband?" I asked.

"Does he drink?"

"No," she said, "He doesn't drink at all."

"Well, does he gamble?"

"Oh, no, he doesn't gamble either," she replied.

"Well, then, does he run around with women?" I asked.

"Oh, heavens, no!"

"Well, what's wrong with him?" I wanted to know.

"He doesn't talk with me," she moaned. "He goes into periods where he just sits and sulks, and most of the time stares at the boob tube. Sometimes he's great and lots of fun, but all of a sudden he turns silent. He has moods."

You can't have everything 100 per cent perfect," I offered. "Perhaps if you adjust a little to his moods—"

"But how can I do that?" she interrupted. "How do you deal with a moody guy? He lets every-little thing bother him, even the weather! And the worst part of it all is that his gloom rubs off on me!"

"Well," I answered, "if his moods can rub off on you, perhaps your moods can rub off on him. Determine every morning that you will have a good day despite his moods; have the philosophy of the silver lining. Every cloud has one, so look for the good in the day, moods and all. Maybe after a while he'll begin doing the same thing. My mother used to play a hymn on the piano called 'Somewhere the Sun is Shining.' That somewhere isn't very far away from any of us! In fact, it's as near as we will let it be!"

Well, the young woman began to look for the sunshine and after a while her husband did too. And the mood situation definitely improved, along with the marriage.

Have you ever been on an airplane and passed through a bank of clouds? All of a sudden you're in sunshine. You can see a little village below the clouds in a great shadow. Probably the people in that village are saying to one another, "Isn't it a gloomy

'HOPE' FILM

Dr. Roy McKeown, president of World Opportunities Inc., producers of the film "Hope," narrated by TV star Anita Bryant, will be present at a showing of the film Sunday, 7:15 p.m. in Bethel Reformed Church, 10012 Ramona St., Bellflower. Among those giving their Christian testimony in "Hope" are Dodger pitcher Don Sutton, noted neuro-surgeon Dr. Francis Williams, and Norm Evans of the Miami Dolphins.

day? It's going to rain," not realizing the sun is just above those clouds. But then the sun comes out and everyone feels better.

Nature can indeed affect our moods, but most moodiness arises from a person's psychological reaction. The answer for dealing with a gloomy day is in the Biblical verse, "Be renewed in the spirit of your mind." It is in how you think, really.

Briefly...

Praying, staying together; a tip on 'finding identity'

By LES RODNEY

In these days of so many broken marriages, it is nice to note that a Valentine party of the Anothan Bible Class at North Long Beach Brethren Church boasted five couples who have been married 50 years or longer.

They are, in alphabetical order (and leading off with a most appropriate name), Mr. and Mrs. Merle (Hazel) Christian, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd (Grace) Coombe, Mr. and Mrs. George (Katharyn) Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney (Lillian) Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. Harry (Maude) Landers.

Kind of puts meaning into a Valentine party, doesn't it.

And say, do you suppose there might be something after all in that line about those who pray together stay together?

THE "UNSTRUCTURED" Jesus movement is helping to create a better climate for ministries supported by church bodies at the nation's colleges and universities, says Rev. Donald Heltzer, director of the National Lutheran Campus Ministry. "The popularization of Jesus is making campus ministry easier," he says. Reports from Lutheran campus ministers say there are more students at worship services, and a renewed interest in study groups.

JACOB STEIN, president of the United Synagogue of America, the congregational arm of Conservative Judaism, and newly elected chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, was asked whether he detected a return to religion among Jewish youth.

"What I see is not a return, but a search for identity," Stein replied. "They search for it in Eastern religions, in the occult, from 'gurus,' but all that really is a search for identity. If they would only pick up some of the great books reflecting the history of a people who have survived longest in civilization, they would find roots meaningful to them. It would show them that we as a people have experienced almost every challenge which history poses before us now."

WE DON'T want to sound ornery, but we continue to receive some newsworthy material after our deadline, which, once again, is noon Thursday to consider material for publication in the Saturday religion section. If you put something in the mail on Thursday—save your stamps. We don't even open the Friday mail until the religion pages are "made up" in the composing room.

Remember, even if the event you think newsworthy is scheduled for the following week, we still need to know about it by noon Thursday, since there is no other religion section but Saturday's. EXAM- PLE: event is scheduled for Friday, March 11th. We need the material to consider by noon Thursday, March 3rd, for the edition of Saturday, March 5th.

Southern Baptists near top mark

Southern Baptists in 1971 baptized the second largest number of persons in their history, the 412,600 total topping the 1970 figure by 12 per cent, the denomination's evangelism division reports.

The record figure of 429,063 was set in 1959.

YOU MEAN THAT CAKE IS JUST GONNA STAND AROUND ALL DRESSED UP LIKE THAT 'TIL TONIGHT?*

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday

Your birthday today: Begins what promises to be a normal phase of personal growth and development. There is apt to be time enough for all the actions you really need to take, with no long waiting. Today's natives are seldom in a tight squeeze for resources, often given to mental and financial speculations.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Once you've met the expectations of your community's Sunday customs, it's a good day for satisfying curiosity, gathering friends for short journeys.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Talking shop is the one thing you shouldn't do as you meet all sorts of people with diverse interests. Sentimental ventures take much of your attention.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Promises are all too easy to believe. Don't hesitate to call the turn on a boastful friend, as nobody is going to pull your chestnuts out of the fire for you now.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): It's so simple to fall into the old familiar weekend ruts of habit again. Try something unfamiliar in both place and activity. Young relations have much to suggest.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Everybody around you has heard your current set of stories; either find a new audience or a new repertoire—or better, a little of both.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There's more satisfaction in doing something for yourself today, at your own speed, instead of having it done for you. A mild surprise turns up in the course of pursuing romantic interests.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forget people who have been treating around you all week; enjoy sports, games with people of about your level of skill.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Social activity promises to spill over your space, use up all your handy supplies. No matter, make do with what you have.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In the course of clowning, you may blurt out an awkward remark; don't worry, people understand after your moment of embarrassment.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Activities drag on very late, from belated beginnings, unless you do something about whatever is being proposed. Have the courage to say "no" and mean it.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Attention to home conditions, local environment, the behavior of people spark a complex of ideas and connected actions, which if followed out will manifest in considerable constructive change.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Sunday now can be a mild and mellow experience, a hope come true, social aspirations pleasantly encouraged.

New kink for Mehta

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

Zubin Mehta is trying a new kink this year. Instead of taking one extended, mid-season leave of absence from his duties as music director of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, Mehta is deserting in two installments.

He was gone (to conducting engagements in Rome, Paris and Vienna) from January 2 to February 14. He will be gone again from March 6 through 27, returning just in time for the Easter Week programs and the season's final month.

This week, however, he is here, conducting three concerts in the Pavilion of The Music Center. At the first of these, Thursday night, Mehta and the Philharmonic (as the ads say, "Together Again!") gave a good demonstration of their combined abilities.

The occasion brought no definitive performances to light, mind you. But it did elicit strong and professional work from all participants.

What most impressed this listener was the polished and accumulative reading Mehta led of the Franck Symphony, a piece regularly programmed at Hollywood Bowl but unheard of at Philharmonic winter subscription event since 1964. This was a most pleasant revival, even for those of us who stopped loving the piece when he emerged from our teens. Everything was so nicely and exaggeratedly in place, and the solo lines (played by, among others, William Kosinski and Henry Sigismonti) were cherishably presented.

What seemed to impress Thursday's audience most was Ferruccio Busoni's Violin Concerto, or, rather, Jaime Laredo's unperturbed playing of that Concerto.

THE WORK itself is disturbingly haunted by the ghosts of earlier, and greater, works in the genre, specifically the Beethoven and the Brahms. But it is not unperturbed, but not unperturbed (and if it were more eclectic, it would be hash). Laredo made easy work of it, and thereby charmed his listeners. Mehta's accompaniment was sometimes ahead, sometimes behind, the soloist, but never so far away as to embarrass anyone.

The program began with some uneventful Mozart, the Symphony No. 36 ("Linz"), to which Mehta brought no special illumination, and a dynamic scheme largely unedimensional. The disinterest one felt coming out of the orchestra during this entire preintermission, in fact, seemed to originate on the podium. In any case, the difference between this week's Mozart and last week's had to be revelatory.

TV star ordered to pay support for secretary's tot

LOS ANGELES (CNS) — TV star Robert Vaughn Friday was ordered to pay $500 per month support for a child born to a television production secretary in London.

The order, by Superior Court Commissioner Hyman O. Danoff, was made for the sole purpose of temporary support.

The commissioner did not make a final finding whether the 38-year-old actor is the father of Matthew, born last March 7 to Miss Kathleen M. Ceaton, 23.

Danoff also ordered Vaughn, Miss Ceaton, and the child to have blood tests to aid him in the ultimate ruling on paternity.

Two films ago Clint nearly died

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Seven months after Clint Walker pulled the spike end of a ski pole from his heart the big fellow had completed two physically demanding westerns and looked as strong as ever.

"Four days after I had heart surgery I was back on my feet," Walker said. "All I've got to remind me of that accident is a scar so small you have to look close to see it."

THE SCAR is not the only residual affect on Walker.

He has become a more thoughtful man, given to self-questioning and slower to judging other persons.

"An accident like that gives you a new set of values," he said, eating a fresh salad at a health food restaurant. "It makes you see who you are and where you are in life."

Walker nearly died last March when he tumbled down a ski slope, the pole lodging in his chest. He remained conscious for 10 minutes before blacking out.

"That was a short 10 minutes," Walker said. "I thought they were going to be my last. Gave me time enough to think, though."

Walker recently completed "Hardcase," the first live-action feature of Hanna-Barbera the top cartoon studio in Hollywood. The role demanded he ride horseback and engage in a roughhouse fight with former pro-footballer Alex Karras. 260 pounds.

Earlier he completed "Pancho Villa" with Telly Savalas in Spain. Only two months after the accident Walker was doing his own fight scenes for that one, too.

At 230 pounds and standing 6-feet, 5-inches, Walker is in excellent health.

"Being in good physical condition helped save my life," he said.

The affable giant continues to work out with weights and other exercises.

Mando regains lightweight crown

Ringsiders vote: Carrasco winner

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

"I'm always making excuses," Mando Ramos said through a battered face, "but I'm such a good cook that I can't stop eating."

It was a loser's line coming from a winner after Ramos' split decision win over Spain's Pedro Carrasco to win the WBC lightweight title at the L.A. Sports Arena Friday night.

"I didn't think he was anything," Ramos said, "but I didn't have any strength, or I would have kept him away."

Ramos scolded himself for over-eating and "drinking too much water" in the days preceding the fight, and felt that the two-hour ordeal of reaching the 135-pound limit at mid-day Friday weakened him.

So did the majority of the 15,165 observers, as well as ringside writers. Nine scored the fight for Carrasco, five for Ramos and two called it a draw.

This paper's reporters agreed on the Spaniard, 9-5-1 and 8-6-1, over the Long Beach favorite.

In the first match in Madrid, Carrasco was knocked down four times but was given the win on a foul. Later, it was ruled "no contest," so apparently the only answer is a rubber match in a neutral country.

Carrasco said through an interpreter, "I thought the California judges would be fair, but I know better now. I wouldn't trust them again."

Both of Ramos' eyes were red and purple and swollen from Carrasco's relentless jabs. He never once cracked the smile of a champion, probably because he didn't feel much like one.

"It's all my fault," he said. "I was really tired. I felt weak in the dressing room. I was scared to death, and I'm never worried before a fight.

"I told Jack (manager Jackie McCoy) that I thought I'd get him in the eighth round, but I just didn't have that steam. I didn't eat anything today. After the weigh-in I went home to have a steak, but I was so shot I took two bites and gave the rest to my dad and went to sleep. I felt weak. I didn't have any strength."

When he recovers, Ramos indicated that his next opponent wouldn't be Carrasco, but Mexican champion Chango Carmona. The other world champ, WBA king Ken Buchanan of Scotland was hardly mentioned.

For the time being, Mando is happy with just one title.

"If I fight like I did tonight, I may not hang onto it too long," he said.

Carrasco loses split decision to L.B. fighter

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

Long Beach's Mando Ramos again is the lightweight champion of the world. He scored a split decision win in 15 rounds over Spain's Pedro Carrasco Friday night in the L.A. Sports Arena.

The fight was a bristling affair that could have been scored either way, but the decision was a happy one for the crowd of 15,165 which was overwhelmingly pro-Ramos. A decision for Carrasco quite possible could have found the Arena turned into a shambles.

Referee Lee Grossman favored Mando 7-6, with judge John Thomas scoring it 9-5 for Ramos. Judge Dick Young's card read 8-5 for the courageous Spaniard. This writer's vote went to the European, 8-6.

frame, and the Long Beacher certainly got some attention from the officials in the 11th and 12th rounds when Carrasco was warned repeatedly by Grossman for butting Mando.

The 13th round was probably Mando's best of the evening. He almost caved in Carrasco's face with a crushing left hook, then he

AS EXPECTED, Carrasco opened up a big lead on points as his pre-fight theory was that he would have to out-point Ramos since he felt he couldn't knock him out.

Our card had Pedro in front 5-1 after seven rounds, while a boxing magazine editor had Carrasco owning a 7-0 edge.

But the durable Ramos came along strong in the late rounds to pull out the verdict, thus silencing talk he had drained himself earlier in the day by sacrificing himself to the sweat-box to shed two pounds after the initial weigh-in.

Looking far more powerful through the neck, chest and shoulders than Carrasco, the Long Beach fighter was a punching bag for the foreigner for most of the match.

BEAUTIFUL combinations by Carrasco continually stung Mando, who seemed surprised that the Spaniard could land punches so consistently.

The fourth round was one of the dirtiest seen in many moons. Pedro butted Ramos and Mando showed his displeasure vigorously. Then Carrasco pinned back Ramos' arms and the Long Beacher retaliated by clipping the Spaniard as the referee was breaking the clinch.

The butting apparently stirred Ramos as he came out in the fifth round and began demonstrating the potent left hook which floored Carrasco four times in their initial fight last November in Madrid.

Carrasco continued to butt Ramos, and the otherwise gentlemanly fighter was warned vigorously by referee Grossman.

Pedro piled up more points in the sixth and seventh rounds and looked to be a runaway winner on points at the midway mark.

Mando opened a slight cut over Carrasco's left eye in the eighth round when he unloaded a right-hand blockbuster that nearly tore off Pedro's head. The eye bled slightly the remainder of the fight, but had nothing to do with the outcome.

Ramos began to catch the Spaniard in the points department in the 10th followed with a right cross that spun Pedro completely around. Before Pedro could regain his senses, Ramos exploded another right that forced Carrasco to lose his balance and dive between Mando's legs.

Round 14 was all Mando's, and it seemed that the final stanza would be the decider. Mando had a slight edge in that one.

In winning this rematch of the Madrid fight which

Vikings 'fight off' Corsairs, 91-81

By CHARLIE MACK
Staff Writer

The Long Beach City College Vikings are on a vendetta.

Defeated by El Camino, Santa Monica and Pasadena during first-round Metropolitan Conference action, the Vikes made a pact to defeat those teams in the second round.

After Friday night's 91-

81 whipping of the SMCC Corsairs in the LBCC gym, which threw the Metro race into a logjam, it's two down and one to go—Tuesday night's match at Pasadena.

What two weeks ago appeared to be a two-team race is now a battle royal among four teams—Santa Monica, El Camino, Pasadena and Long Beach.

The Vikings, riding a five-game conference win streak, are 7-3, one game behind the Corsairs and ECC, tied for first with 8-2 records. Pasadena is third at 8-3.

In one of the more volatile games of a highly emotional season, the Vikings broke open a see-saw battle midway through the first half and coasted home with their 22nd win in 26 games.

Roller-coasted home is more like it.

In a season where the basketball is becoming more of the rule than the exception, the 2,118 fans attending saw the Metropolitan Conference version of a free-for-all.

With the Vikings padding a 91-76 lead with 51 seconds remaining, the ball came into LBCC's Rich Plante, the game's leading scorer with 27 points.

Plante, who had been getting away with elbow throwing repeatedly, was challenged by 6-10 Greg White as soon as he received Dan Peters' pass.

White, the celebrated transfer from USC, started flailing at Plante, which brought LBCC's Bill Mullen into the action—along with both benches and a handful of fans.

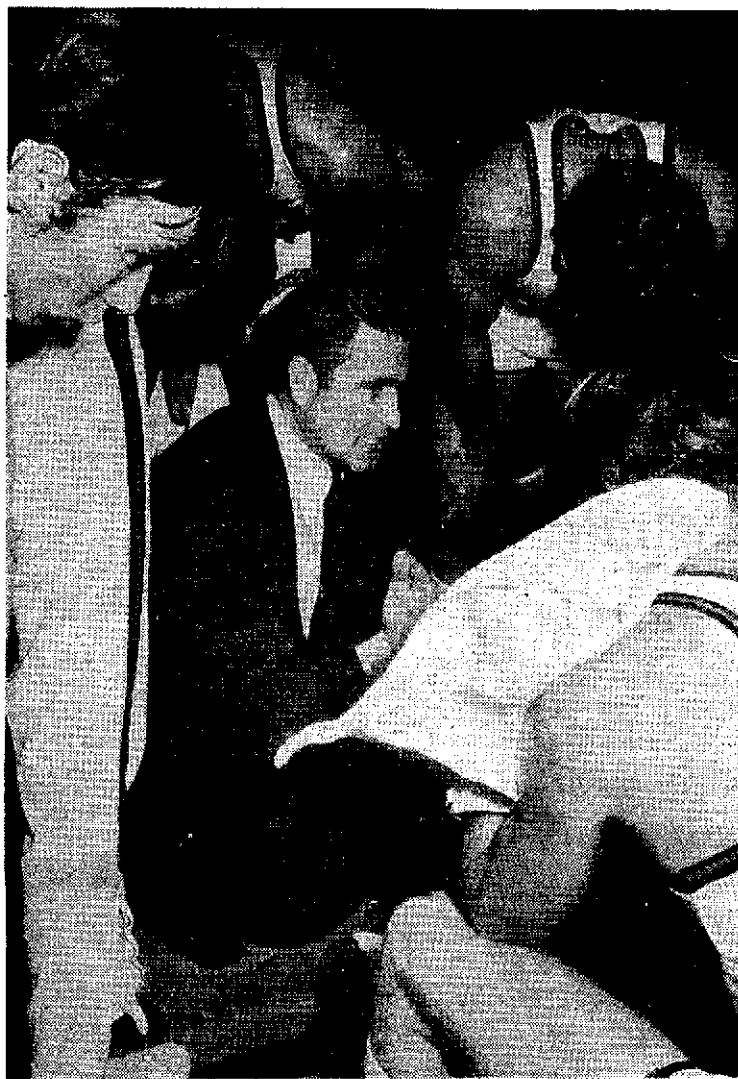

After relative peace had been restored by officials Simon Peters and Lorinzer Clark, White was charged with a personal foul and a technical foul, while Plante and Mullen were slapped with "T's." All three players were removed from the game.

Santa Monica coach Bob Dye went one step further — he sent five reserves into the game and pulled the rest of his squad off the court and into the locker room much to the delight of the LBCC partisans.

The disturbance took much of the glimmer off what LBCC coach Lute Olson called his team's "best game of the year."

Lakers finally win comedy of errors

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

What should have been a rout wound up a close game for the Lakers Friday night as the regulars came off the bench in the final five minutes to save a 125-114 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers at the Forum.

In the closing minutes the game became a comedy of errors, so much that laughs exceeded cheers from the 15,357 fans. The Lakers committed 34 ball-control errors, a season high, while Portland made 29.

"They tried to give the game to us, but we didn't want it real bad," said Portland coach Stu Inman, in an accurate analysis of the game.

Portland's defense, supposedly much-improved, couldn't cope with the Lakers' fast break, but at least the Blazers didn't quit when they fell 26 points behind, and that's an improvement.

Led by Rick Adelman, Portland cut its deficit to 11 points with 5:11 remaining, and that's when Laker coach Bill Sharman made a quick call for his regulars. Four of them had left at 9:42 with a 22-point lead.

Stiff from an extended rest, the first-teamers had trouble getting untracked enabling Portland to draw within seven points on two occasions. But in their anxiety to catch up, the Blazers made six turnovers in the last two minutes.

Gail Goodrich led the Lakers with 34 points, including 16 in the third period when the Lakers surged ahead, 100-75. Jerry West had 25, all but two in the first three periods, and Wilt Chamberlain didn't miss any of his nine field goal tries.

Happy Hairston (19) and Chamberlain (14) had only 10 fewer rebounds than the entire Portland team.

"It's the second worst effort they've given me," said new coach Inman. "We bombed out in Seattle one night... that was the worst. You can look for a better effort tomorrow."

The teams play in Portland tonight.

Sharman wasn't happy, but it is hard to be critical in the dog days of the season. His team owns a 52-9 record, and a win of any kind is sufficient until near playoff time.

"I'm concerned a little that we aren't as sharp as we used to be," said Sharman, "but I'm sure we'll bear down when the playoffs begin."

It was the second consecutive home game that Sharman's reserves couldn't hold a lead and had to be replaced. Sharman blamed himself for putting them all in at Edwards would settle for an effort similar to the one he got the first time the teams met.

The tigers jumped to a 20-2 lead in that contest

"I don't think it was a case of that at all," Edwards said. "If anything, I think maybe the kids were too tense. I know we didn't play well."

49ERS VS. PACIFIC: TITLE TUSSLE

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Pacific coach Dick Edwards spent an hour drilling his team in Cal State Long Beach's cozy gym Friday, and then offered his theories on the home court advantage.

"Sure," Edwards began, "Long Beach has won a lot of games (53) in a row at home. But it isn't the gym that's winning those games, it's the team. If you'll notice, Long Beach has won a lot of games at other places, too."

Today, though, the 49ers would settle for winning another one in the gym.

The 49ers and Tigers collide in a 1:10 p.m. contest that has been sold out for months.

A Cal State victory would give the 49ers a two-game lead with two in play in an attempt to win their third consecutive Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. title and the resulting trip to the NCAA playoffs.

The Tigers, who beat Long Beach, 104-86, in Stockton, enter today's game a game behind the 49ers. They must win today to realistically remain in contention for the title.

Mando gave 'em a scare before he pounded off win over scales

They all stood around like expectant fathers, and their baby was Mando Ramos.

"He'll make it," matchmaker Don Chargin said nervously and with a lot of conviction.

The scene was the ring of the Olympic Auditorium, less than 12 hours before Ramos was to fight the Spaniard for the world lightweight title, WBC version, at the L.A. Sports Arena.

A large Fairbanks scale with steel wheels was set up in the middle of the ring, the central prop in the drama that seems to precede all of Ramos' bouts. For a change, everybody knew where he was, but that's what was making them all so nervous. He was sitting in a steam bath trying to sweat off the two pounds that threatened to turn the evening's plans into a non-title travesty.

The weigh-in was scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Pedro Carrasco, Ramos' opponent, was a half-hour early. Predictably, Mando was late, but only by five minutes, which had to upset the odds immensely.

Quickly he stripped down to his white bikini skivvies and stepped onto the platform that must have chilled the bottoms of his bare feet. Roy Tennyson of the boxing commission set the weights at 135, but when Mando stepped aboard, the arm refused to balance. It seemed welded to the upper part of the frame.

"One-thirty-seven," Tennyson announced.

Mando was stunned. Tennyson jiggled the weights, but the scale remained firm.

Mando stepped down, muttering something like, "I'm telling you, that should be 135."

CARRASCO TOOK HIS TURN and had no trouble, weighing 134, one pound under the limit.

Mando announced, "I'll be back in a half-hour."

Manager Jackie McCoy muttered in disgust, "More like an hour, I'd say."

Chargin felt faint and was given oxygen from a portable tank. Publicist Van Barbieri took a couple of tranquilizing pills.

Ramos, pulling his clothes back on, appeared to be trim.

"Last night," his father Ray said, "he said he was 136 1/4 on the scale at home, and he was 135 1/4 this morning. I wasn't even worried."

The elder Ramos has taken over responsibility for Mando's training from McCoy. Mando has had trouble making weight before — he had to lose 7 and 11 pounds overnight before his last two fights — and he was especially secretive about his weight before this one.

"I'll be all right," he kept assuring people, "there's nothing to worry about!" — but he wouldn't let anybody oversee his weight, not even his father.

"We got him a scale for home," co-manager Lee Priia said, "just like this one."

"But," Ray added, "the only time he let me look before this morning was the other day, and it was 137 1/4."

ing for the nearest steamroom, finally locating Los Angeles' Downtown YMCA.

"When we got there," McCoy said, "they asked us if we were members. He had to join up to get in. Cost us two bucks. Then it was another 75 cents for the steam bath. He came out once to check his weight and when he started to go back in the guy said, 'Hey, wait a minute — that'll be another 75 cents.' We had to pay that three times — and, oh yes, 10 cents for a towel."

Although, Ramos spent about an hour in the steam. He returned to the Olympic looking very drawn, stripped down again and stepped back onto the scale.

Tennyson studied the figures. Again, the arm refused to budge. The commissioner moved the small weight very slightly to the right until the arm balanced.

"Mando," he announced, "you're about a quarter-pound over."

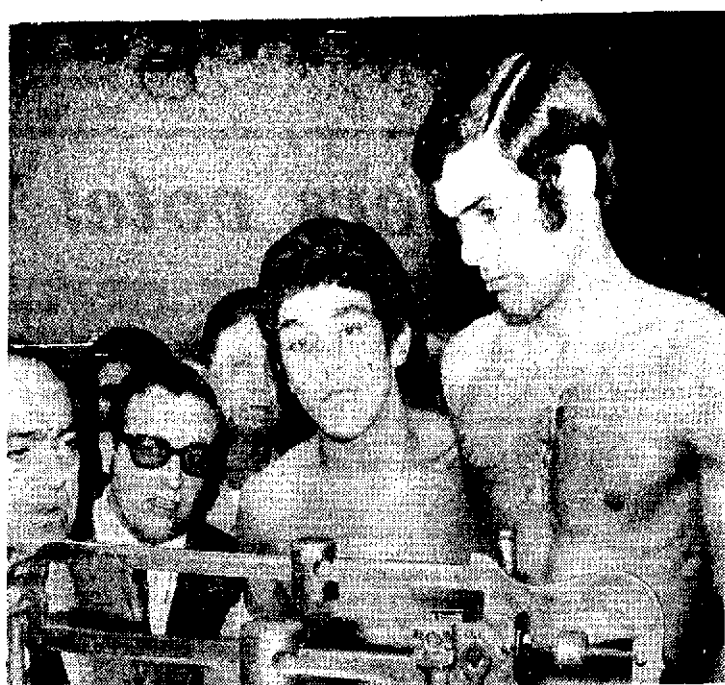

Somebody suggested, "Oh, hell, take off your shorts."

Mando did so and stepped back on nude.

"You're still a quarter over," Tennyson said, as the arm bobbed slowly from top to bottom.

"That's not over," Mando protested, not realizing that the scales were set at his actual weight instead of the legal weight.

AN OLD TRAINER named Cannonball Green took an angry, cursing Ramos in tow to the catacombs that pass for dressing facilities in the bowels of the beloved old barn. Somebody produced some ointment that was supposed to induce sweating, and Cannonball rubbed Mando down from head to toe, then sent him into the steaming shower room next door to shadow box away the final four ounces.

"Why don't you just cut his hair off?" someone suggested to McCoy.

McCoy just smiled. Mando would rather give up the four ounces in blood. Fortunately, neither was necessary.

Cannonball dried him off and Mando returned to the ring, wearing only a towel. He removed the towel, remounted the scale and held a very deep breath — as if that would help!

The scale balanced perfectly at 135.

Mando raised his arms victoriously and his smile lit up the whole arena.

"I told you there was nothing to worry about," he grinned.

Mando had lost two pounds; Chargin looked like he'd lost 10.

Back in the dressing room, Mando took a long drag on a soft drink and bubbled, "Boy, that tastes good."

His suffering was over, at least for another fight.

"I'm gonna make Carrasco pay for this," he vowed.

the same time, and vowed to ditch that system.

Portland, 3-6 under Inman, has made some significant changes. The Blazers try harder on defense, which has been noted, and they have turned their offense over to Adelman.

"I consider him an excellent quarterback," said Inman about the five-year veteran from Loyola who finished with 24 points, hitting 11 of 15 from the floor. He also led his team in assists with eight.

Sidney Wicks and Geoff Petrie, the power of the Portland offense, had mediocre nights. Petrie isn't as quick as he once was, and Wicks hasn't learned yet how to move without the ball.

MIDWINTER SAIL LURES 1,000 TODAY

Long Beach's inner and outer harbors and the ocean beyond will be bathed in a mass of white sails for today's 43rd Midwinter Regatta.

Nearly 1,000 sailboats are entered in the annual classic, a rugged test of sailing ability. Being an Olympic year, particular attention will be paid to five classes.

They are Dragon, Finn, Soling, Star and Tempest. All are Olympic events, with the largest number of entries expected in the Soling class, made up of 23-foot single-hulled boats with three-man crews.

Small boats will sail out of Alamitos Bay while the larger ocean-racing vessels will be based at Los Angeles Yacht Club.

Among the sponsoring clubs are Long Beach, Seal Beach, Alamitos Bay, Little Ships Fleet of Long Beach, Los Angeles, Cabrillo Beach, Huntington Harbor, King Harbor and California YC of Marina del Rey.

physical," he analyzed. "I think the major reason for all the fights this year has been pro basketball."

"College and high school players watch the pros bang around a lot. Whereas the pros can handle it, the college and high school kids can't and we have a lot of players with short fuses exploding and starting fights."

Almost everyone who played contributed to the Viking win.

Plante, with his spinning left-handed drives and dead-eye outside shooting, led the way, but it was far from a one-man show.

Steve Dallas, showing there's more to rebounding than height and jumping ability, gathered in eight boards, seven in the first half, and added 14 points.

Mark Beauchamp and Floyd Heaton, scoring 13 and 11, neutralized SMCC's inside strength with their aggressive defensive play, while Bill Mullen ran the Viking passing-game offense to near perfection.

The real keys may have been reserves Dana Peters and John Sagehorn, who each scored 10 points.

Peters hit all five of his field goal attempts from long range.

Will Huskies spring trap today?

Rigors of road awaiting Bruins

SEATTLE (Special) — There's no question top-ranked UCLA is king of its home court at Pauley Pavilion.

Fifteen of their 19 games have been at home. All were victories.

But the "climactic seven" final games of the Pacific-8 Conference season are certain to be more difficult for the Bruins, who face Washington today.

"It's great to be 7-0 at the midpoint of our conference schedule," said UCLA coach John Wooden, "but I fully realize, and am impressing the fact upon my players, that five of these seven have been at home and five of the next seven are on the road."

Home or road, however, the Bruins look too strong for the Huskies, who were obliterated at Pauley last weekend, 109-70.

UCLA's 6-11 center, Bill Walton, took on Washington senior Steve Hawes in a head-to-head duel and came away with 27 points and 24 rebounds in 28 minutes of action.

"It was a most remarkable performance," admitted Wooden.

UCLA has won 34 games in a row since losing to Notre Dame in January of 1971 and has captured 22 consecutive Pacific-8 games since losing to USC in March of 1970.

Today's UCLA-Washington meeting will be the Pacific-8 Conference television game of the week. It will be aired on Ch. 5 at 2:30 p.m.

UCLA moves on to Pullman for a Monday night encounter with Washington State. The Bruins had difficulties with the Cougars for 25 minutes last week but emerged with an 89-55 win.

Monday night's game will be televised by Ch. 5 at 8 o'clock.

Blancas blazes with 61

10-birdie round nets Phoenix lead

PHOENIX (AP) — Homero Blancas blazed home with a 10-under-par 61 to take a four-stroke lead Friday after the second round of the $125,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

The dark, swarthy Blancas had a 36-hole total of 131, 11 under par for two trips over the 6,641-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

His 61 represented the lowest score on the pro tour since Johnny Miller fired the same figure on the course two years ago.

Blancas had 10 birdies, no bogeys and used only 25 putts in his remarkable round.

Four strokes back at 135 were George Boutell, veteran Gene Littler, Dale Douglass and young Jerry Heard. Boutell, a graduate of nearby Arizona State University, had a 67, Heard and Littler 68 and Douglass 69 in the mild but slightly overcast weather.

Australian Bruce Devlin, Puerto Rican veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez and Marly Fleckman were next at 137, six strokes off Blancas's scorching pace. Devlin had a 70, Rodriguez and Fleckman 68.

Blancas, a happy-go-lucky native of Houston, appeared to be his usual casual, relaxed self the whole way, joking with the gallery.

"It looks like an easy game," someone said when he holed a 14-foot birdie putt to go nine under for the day.

"It is — if you can putt," replied Blancas, who had to work his way out of potential trouble on several occasions. The magic putter saved him every time. He had 11 one-putt greens — including one string of seven in a row — and holed birdie putts totaling almost 50 yards in distance.

Citrus 250 victory Allison braves wind, rain, mud

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's been a week for high-speed tragedy at Daytona International Speedway. A week, too, for low-speed hilarity.

Now comes the big one.

"The Daytona 500 is the business race," says multi-talented driver Bobby Allison. "The little events are great fun, but the 500 puts groceries in the freezer."

Allison began a winning week Thursday by capturing a 125-mile qualifier for the $178,000 Daytona 500, driving his Chevy at 178 mph. He won again Friday in the Grand American Class, taking the Citrus 250 in a Mustang.

Today it's the Permatex 300 in a Mercury for work-horse Bobby.

"I'd love to take four in a row, but the 500 is where the gravy is," said the 34-year-old speed whiz from Hueytown, Ala. "But even if I swept everything this week, I can't really be happy."

Allison watched in horror Thursday as a close buddy, Raymond (Friday) Hassler, was crunched to death in a 12-car pileup.

But Friday's Citrus 250 provided some comic relief as competitors slipped and skidded through a 30-minute rain-storm.

"You get some fun out of it," said Allison, "once you learn how far you'll slide in a puddle or on a muddy bank."

Once, Allison's Mustang struck a slick spot going into a turn and he missed it altogether. "I kept guiding and it kept sliding," he said. "Soon, I'd missed an entire section of the track. I just kept on going and took my one-minute penalty. It was easier than turning back."

Winds snarled at 41 mph during the deluge and Allison's pace was slowed from 100 miles an hour to a creepy 50 mph.

"I've got a two-way radio in my car," he said. "I put in a hurry-up call for some rain tires. It was like driving on ice. Once I got the rain tires mounted, I was okay."

Trojans hone offense for WSU

PULLMAN, Wash. (Special) — Phase II of USC's new offense faces a stern test tonight when the Trojans take on Washington State in Bohler Gym.

The Trojans, operating with a one-guard offense because of the loss of all-America candidate Paul Westphal, defeated the Cougars, 78-66, last weekend in Los Angeles.

"Washington State will have seen our new offense and may be better prepared to handle it," says USC coach Bob Boyd. "On the other hand, we've had another week in which to practice with it."

In the new attack, Dan

Anderson is the guard, Joe Mackey and Bruce Clark are at the wings, and Mike Westra and Ron Riley are at low posts.

The return to the basket area seems to have rejuvenated Riley, who had hit a slump operating from a forward position.

Riley had 48 points and 31 rebounds in the Trojans' wins over Washington State and Washington last week.

He now has 989 points and has climbed to seventh on the all-time career scoring list.

USC goes into tonight's game, which will be broadcast at 8 by radio station KFI in Southern California, with a 13-6 record and a 6-1 mark in conference action.

Washington State is 9-10 for the season and 1-6 in conference competition. USC plays Washington at Seattle Monday night.
